INTRODUCTION.

It is just ten years ago since this Grammar was first written. The first edition of it having been sold out, it became necessary to issue a second one, which the Government of Bengal again is kind enough to print and publish at their own Secretariat Press. The Author has made use of this opportunity, and now offers to the student of Kurukh a revised and enlarged edition of its Grammar, embodying his own continued studies and many valuable suggestions made by the Revd. C. Mehl, German Evangelical Lutheran Mission, Chota Nagpur. With regard to the English text of this book I am indebted to Mr. John Reid, I. C. S., for kindly going through it making corrections in the idiom. In sending it to the Press the Author feels constrained to express his gratitude to Government for the encouragement given him in preparing this volume and to such scholars as Professor Sten Konow of Christiania and Julien Vinson of the Paris University, who have been good enough to comment on his Kurukh Grammar. The former says that "it commands his greatest respect," and the latter calls it a "publication of incontestable utility and real merit."

Kurukh, according to the Census of 1901, is spoken by 609,721 people, who live chiefly in the Chota Nagpur Division and the adjacent feudatory states, but are found also in the north-eastern districts of Bengal, in Assam and other parts of India. In Chota Nagpur itself Kurukh is spoken by 346,617 people; of these, there are in the Ranchi district 314,778; in Palamau 21,606; in Singhbhum 6,973; in Hazaribagh 2,930; in Manbhum 330. The figures obtained from the states bordering on Chota Nagpur and belonging now politically to the Central Provinces are no very reliable. The number of the Kurukh-speaking people in Sirguja is given approximately at 23,430; in Jaspur 25,000; in Gangpur 53,000; in Udaypur 1,598; in Korea 680; in the Sakti State 509; in the Bilaspur district 192. In the districts and feudatory states now belonging to the Orissa division there are said to be 54,274 Kurukh-speaking people, viz., in the Sambalpur District 29,000; in the Bamra state 15,704; in Raigarh 4312; in Rairakhol 1,402; in Sarangarh 885; in the Sonpur State 80.; in the Patna estate 666; in Bonai about 500; in Kālāhandi 51; in the other Orissa tributary states 2,945.

In and near Calcutta there was in 1901 a Kurukh-speaking population of 1,923; in the 24-Parganas 2,244; in the Hugli district 1,630; in Nadia 82; in the centre of Bengal, the Santal Parganas we find 1,744 Orāos; in Angul, Khondmāl and Balasur 1,138; in Bardwān, Midnapur and Birbhum taken together 767; in Maldā 2,157; Purnia 2,250; Bhagalpur 2,984 in Rangpur and Bōgrā 1,001.

Many Orāos have emigrated from Chota Nagpur to the tea districts of Jalpaiguri and Darjiling. In the former the census of 1901 shewed 3,828; in Darjiling 7,449; besides there are in Dinajpur 4,573 and in Rajshahi 5,485.

In the Shāhābād and Champaran Districts there are 969 Kurukh-speaking people.

About 10,000 have emigrated into the tea districts of Assam. In Lakhimpur-Dibrugarh there are 4,150; in Tejpur 2,800; in Sibsagar and Jorhat 1,850; in Kachār 1,251; in Nowgang 475 and in Kāmrup 265.

Kurukh is not spoken by all who belong to this tribe; there are for example towards the east of Ranchi about 23,000 Kurukh people who speak a Mundā dialect called "Hōpobiā jhūgar." These people are called Kērā-Orāos. The spread of Hindi in parts of the Ranchi District is ever on the increase, so that the rising generation of the aboriginal tribes begin to forget their mother-tongues and to speak Chota Nagpuria Hindī only. This is specially true as regards the Kurukh of the Biru Parganā.

On the other hand, Kurukh is spoken by other tribes some of whom have adopted it as their mother-tongue. The Bergē-Orāo and Bergē-Kharīā of Gangpur all speak Kurukh. In the Orissa tributary states and in the states now belonging to the Central Provinces, it is spoken by the tribes called Kisān and Kōrā or Kōḍā. In Raigarh and in Behar the language has been returned as Dhangarī; in Jaspur as Khendroi. In some parts people who speak this language have been returned in the census as Kōls; but on the other hand, about 2,500 have given Kurukh as their mother-tongue, though they belong to different other tribes, such as Muṇḍā, Goṇḍ, Santal, Bhumij, Tamariā, Rājput and Kurmi.

It has been asked, why call this language Kurukh and the tribe which speaks it by this name? The answer is that these people call themselves Kurukh and their language "Kurukh Kathā." It is true they have been known formerly chiefly by the name of Orāo, but this is a term seldom used by the people themselves; they are also called Kōls and dhāngar or dhaṅgar, Kisān and Kōrā. The four latter terms are certainly applied to the Kurukh by foreigners. To begin with, the word Kōl, if it is identical with horō, man, in Muṇḍāri, as it appears to be, is not applicable to Kurukhs. Then, again, dhāngar means a man who works for wages, these wages consisting of dhān-rice. Kisān is a Hindī word, meaning cultivator, and so is Kōrā or Kōḍā, which means digger. Thus Kurukh and Orāo are the only two terms really applicable to the people who belong to the tribe called by these names.

There has been much difference of opinion with regard to the meanings of these terms. To the author the conclusion arrived at by Professor Sten Konow about the meaning of Orāo or Urāu seems to be correct. He derives it from the words urāpai, urāpō and urāng, "man" in the Dravidian dialects of Kaikādī and Burganḍi. The word Orāo or Urāu would therefore mean the same as horō in Mundārī, i.e., man. The meaning of the word Kurukh cannot be so clearly traced. It probably means a speaker, which if correct, would be nothing unusual, because just as people like to call themselves men, so they call themselves "speakers" in contradistinction to other foreign people, whose language is unknown to them and who therefore to their conception are not speakers; for Kurukh may be derived from the verb kur or kurc'anā, to shout or to stammer. In Brāhuī, a sister-language of Kurukh, belonging to the same Dravidian family, the suffix ok is added to the base of the verb to form a participle; hence Kurukh or Kuruk or Kuruk may mean speaking or a speaker. There is another Kurukh word, which means a fence or a homestead fenced in, Kurgi or Kurkhi; if Kurukh be connected with this word, it would mean an inhabitant.

According to their tradition the Orāos came to India from the west, probably viā Baluchistan, where Brāhuī is spoken. They were settled for some time in the Karnātic, where Kanarese prevails, which like Brāhuī is somewhat connected with Kurukh. From there they are said to have come up along the banks of the Narbadā river and to have finally settled in the Shahabad district, where they are still found in some villages. From that country they were expelled by the Mohamedans about the twelfth century, and withdrew to the Chota Nagpur and Rajmahal hills. The descendants of the original race in this place call themselves Māler, "men" and their language Māltō, apparently "men's speech." According to Dr. Sten Konow, however, Māl means hill and Māler hill-people and as a matter of fact they are called in Hindi "Pahā-riā" hill people.

In Chota Nagpur the Kurukhs found the Munḍās, the Tōris, Asurs and other Munḍā tribes, who retired towards the south leaving the Kurukhs in possession of the north-western part of the Ranchi District, where the latter now live in villages, which still bear Munḍā names in some instances and have a Munḍā or a Tōri as village priest, see appendix XII. In Chota Nagpur the Orāos were subsequently subjugated by Hindus and Mohamedans who came from Bihār, whose language Bhojpūri Hindi, greatly influenced the vocabulary of the Kurukh kathā and to some extent even its grammar. Later on the Orāos spread over the whole of Chota Nagpur, living along with and among Munḍā tribes, by whose dialects Kurukh again appears to have been enriched or modified; and finally they reached the tracts where Bengali and Oriā is spoken. These languages also contributed to the Kurukh vocabulary. On the other hand it may be assumed that some Kurukh words have found their way into the languages of their neighbours.

The fact that Kurukh belongs to the great Dravidian family spoken in the south of India is now so universally recognised, that it is quite unnecessary to demonstrate it. The term Dravidian according to Dr. Sten Konow is identical with Tamīl. The so-called Dravidian languages are Tamīl, Kanarese, Telugu, Malāyalām, Gōṇḍī, Kurukh, Tulū, Kūṛ, Māltō, Brāhūī, Koḍagu, Kolārin or Naikī, Kotā and Todā, given in the order of their relative importance. The total number of people who speak these Dravidian languages is 57,497,982. The relation of Kurukh to the other numbers of the group is discussed in appendices I and II. Kurukh is not divided into dialects, though there are some differences in pronunciation as well as in grammar to be met with in different parts of India where standard Orāo is spoken. These differences are noted in Appendix No. III

PRONUNCIATION.

A.—Letters.

§ 1. THE Kurukh language not being a written one, the system of writing and spelling Kurukh words adopted in this volume is the same as that authoritatively adopted for all Asiatic languages at the Oriental Congress at Geneva, with such slight alterations as are required for their correct pronunciation. In printing the Gospels and other religious books the Dēvanāgrī characters have been employed, since they are more extensively known to those Kurukhs who have received an elementary education. The author's collection of Kurukh folk-lore has been printed in Roman characters, as it is intended as a text-book to this grammar, and for use by students who are not familiar with Devanāgrī.

B.—Vowels.

§ 2. The Kurukh alphabet has five vowels, each of which is pronounced either short or long, viz., a, ā, e, ē, i ī, o ō, u ū. The sound of each may be understood from the following examples in English :—

Examples.		Corresponding Dēvanāgrī character.
The short a as in America	...	अ
„ long ā „ father	...	आ final ।
„ short e „ better	...	ए „ „
„ long ē „ rate	...	” ” ”

* Remarks.—No distinction can be made between the short and long e and o in the evanagri characters.

Examples.	Corresponding Devanāgri character,
The short i as in bit	...	इ	final	।
„ long- i „ tree	...	ई	„	ी
„ short o „ box	...	ओ	„	ी
„ long ō „ both	...	„	„	„
„ short u „ full	...	उ	„	ू
„ long ū „ brute	...	ऊ	„	ू

Great care must be taken to pronounce these different vowels distinctly, as an entirely different meaning will be conveyed if long and short vowels are not properly distinguished, e.g.—

Kharnā, to steal ; khārnā, to despise.

Pesnā, to pick up ; pēsñā, to order.

Kitnā, to rot ; kitñā, to fire.

Ojnā, to sew ; ōjnā, to spin.

Urnā, to be satiated ; ūrñā, to blow.

Mund, before ; mūnd, three.

C.—Diphthongs.

D.—Consonants.

§ 4. There are 22 consonants in the Kurukh alphabet, besides the aspirated forms of some of them. The student who is familiar with Hindī will find no difficulty in pronouncing them correctly, except th a the guttural kh requires some special attention. We give them in the alphabetical order, viz.—

b , pronounced exactly like the English b :	bi , egg.
bh , as in English club-house :	bhir , necessity.
c , like the ch in chief :	calkur , sand.
ch , as in coach-house :	chēchnā , to pound.
d (dental), as in Hindi words :	dighā , long.
dh , aspirated form of the preceding :	Dharmēs , God.
ḍ , cerebral :	daḍkā , manger.
ḍh , the aspirated form of the former :	ḍhāk , big drum.
f , as in fowl :	fekrārnā , to howl.
g , as in gift, always hard :	gali , time.
gh , aspirated form :	pāghā , rope.
h , as in house :	hebrnā , to throw away.
j , like the j in John :	jok , little.
jh , the aspirated form of j :	jhāūsā , to rebuke.
k , as in king :	kukk , head.
kh , the aspirated form of k :	khattā , foreigner.
kh , this is a guttural sound, occurring most frequently in Kurukh words.

It is to be pronounced like the German ch in ich, or the Greek χ in $\epsilon\chi\theta\upsilon\varsigma$, or as in the Scotch loch: khedd, foot; khēkhēl, earth. L and m are like the corresponding English consonants: lakrā, tiger, mankhā, buffalo.

N is also the same as in English: nēlā, to-morrow.

§ 5. The nasal n in Kurukh takes four different forms—

- (1) The first resembles somewhat the n in the French bon; this sound in Kurukh is rather a nasalizing of vowels: it is represented by the sign placed over the vowel which is to be nasalized; example: khēsō, blood, jōkh, servant; Urāo or Orāo.
- (2) The second is the nasal n which in Hindī is connected with the guttural consonants. It is written thus, n̄; its pronunciation is like the ng in the English words sing, swing, sang, whenever it stands at the end of a syllable or is followed by the aspirate h; however, if followed by a vowel, the soft g at the end of it is pronounced as hard as the g in the English words go, stronger; for this reason it is written in all such cases ng throughout this book. Examples: thus in the words eng-hai, my; ning-hai, thy; tanghai, his; bang, father; the pronunciation is: eng-hai, not eng-g-hai; bang, not bang g; etc., but in engā, to me; ningā, to thee; tangā, to him; engan, me, ningan, thee; tangan, him; etc., the g must be pronounced hard.

- (3) The third nasal n appears in connection with palatals, and is written ñ; e.g., beñjnā, to marry; khañjnā, to bear fruit, cuñjnā, to pound; etc. This nasal n is not so distinctly pronounced as the foregoing ones.
- (4) The fourth nasal n is a cerebral, and is written ṅ; e.g., aṅdrā male; oṅṭā, one; peṅḍē pipe.

§ 6. r, is pronounced as in English: rasnā to permeate.

r, this cerebral is pronounced something like the rr in the North-umbrian burr; erṣā, house; ēret, bow.

rḥ, the aspirated form of r: tirhnā, to walk one after the other.

p, is sounded like the English p: pellō, girl.

s, is also pronounced as in English words: sendrā, sport.

t, like the English t: tesmā to tie.

th, the aspirated form of the preceding, : ethrnā, to appear.

ṭ, this letter with its aspirate can be pronounced only as the corresponding letter in Hindī by striking the tip of the tongue on the palate just above the front gums, as uṭnā, to tie up; kḥoṭṭnā, to smash.

iḥ, guthi, form of plural, toḥnā, earthen lamp.

y, this semivowel is pronounced like the y in yoke: ayō, mother, iyā, here, but at the end of a syllable its sound is after a short o like i and after a long o like ē, e.g., khoynā, (khoinā), to reap; kḥōynā, (kḥōēnā) to measure. It is also sometimes changed into j, e.g., khojkan, I measured.

v, semivowel, written sometimes w: lēvā or lēva nannā, to prepare the ground for sowing. Nēvrārna or neurārna, to wean away.

§ 7. In printing Kurukh with Dēvanāgarī characters, the following have been made use of to represent the above consonants:—

Gutturals,	k, क ;	kh, ख ;	g, ग ;	gh, घ ;	ṅg, ङ ;	kh, ख.
Palatals,	c च ;	ch, छ ;	j, ज ;	jh झ.	ñ, ण.
Cerebrals,	t, ट ;	th, ठ ;	d, ड ;	dh, ढ ;	n, न ;	r, र ; rh, ण.
Dentals,	t, त ;	th, थ ;	d, द ;	dh, ध ;	n, न.
Labials,	p, प ;	ph, (f) फ ;	b, ब ;	bh, म ;	m, म.
Semivowels,	y, य ;	r, र ;	l, ल ;	v, व.
Sibilant	s, स ;	Aspirate,	h, ह.

Nasal n connected with a long vowel has to be written in Dēvanāgarī with the sanunāsika or candra-bindu, e.g., khēsō, खँसो ; jōkh जोख. The guttural nasal n in baṅg, father, is written बङ्ग ; niṅghai, etc., निङ्गहै or निघै in enṅā, to me., एङ्गा ; in kaṅk, wood, कङ्क ; beṅjnā to marry, is written बेङ्गना ; onṅā, one, is written ओङ्गा.

CHAPTER II.

ON ENUNCIATION AND PERMUTATION OF VOWELS AND CONSONANTS AND ACCENTUATION.

A.—Enunciation.

§ 8. It is a peculiar feature in the Kurukh language that in the infinitive form of the verb in which two short vowels of the same description stand together, these vowels are pronounced separately, with the accent on the first of them, as kukra'anā, the ending being nā as in Hindī, the root kukra'a; either of the two latter vowels being enunciated in so distinctly separate a manner as to leave a short hiatus between them which will be marked throughout this book by an apostrophe': kukra'anā, to put down pillows under the head; tōkra'anā, to ask repeatedly; likewise the words hē'enā, to bind, nē'enā, to ask for; khē'enā, to die, must be pronounced: hē'ena, nē'ena, khē'enā, not hēnā, nēnā, khēnā. So it is with the double i; e'inā, to give; bi'inā, to boil. Likewise the double o: cō'ona, to rise; hō'ona, to take away.

The apostrophe will be employed also in words in which an elision occurs, which takes place whenever the emphatic affix am or im is added to a pronoun, as ēkā, who and am, ēk'am, whosoever; endr, what and im, endr'im, whatsoever. Each of these words is to be pronounced as if it were not one but two words, ēk'am, endr'im.

The hiatus occurs also in the adverb ma'ā, not and mak'īē, if not then.

Verbs ending in a consonant evince in the imperative mood a distinct hiatus between the root and the imperative ending: tisignā, to open; tisig'ā! open! ondrnā, to bring: ondr'ā! bring! mucnā, to shut; muc'ā! shut!

In causal verbs, the pronunciation of the double aa is the same as in simple verbs, as described above: nanta'anā, to cause to be made; menta'anā, to proclaim.

The hiatus is also perceivable in the ending of verbs in the future tense, passive voice and in verbs the stem of which ends in r: tēbrnā, to be extinguished, t̄bro'ō; tegrnā, to confess, tegro'ō. However in these cases the second o is long. Also in the past tenses of the verb, first person feminine, a hiatus appears just before the ending which signifies the person: e.g., ur̄nā to be satiated; ur'an, I was satiated: ba'anā, to speak; bāo'an, I spoke.*

§ 9. With regard to double consonants, great care must be taken to pronounce each one of them distinctly, as otherwise the meaning will become quite different from what is intended. Thus kull-kan, I covered, not kul-kan, which would mean opened; essnā, to weave, not esnā, to break; errnā, to sweep, not ēr̄nā, to see.

B.--Permutation.

§ 10. In the past tenses of the verb the double short vowels aa, ee, oo change into one long corresponding vowel, viz., aa becomes ā, ee becomes ē, oo becomes ō, e.g., ba'anā, to speak; bāc̄kan, I spoke; hē'ena, to bind; hēc̄kan, I bound; cō'ona, to rise; cōc̄kan, I rose.

There are, however, exceptions to this rule; for example, in hō'onā, to take away; the double oo does not change into a long, but into one short o in the past tense: ockan, I took away.

The double short ii coalesces into a short one, e.g., ci'inā, to give, cickan, I gave; short u and i combined become short u in the past tense of the verb, e.g., uinā, to plough, usskan, I ploughed.

Likewise, short o and long ē combined become short o: pōēnā, to rain; possō, it rained.

§ 11. Single vowels change in the following manner: short e becomes short i in the past tense: errnā: ir̄rkan, I swept; long ē change into long ī: ēr̄nā: ir̄kan, I saw; short e changes into i; also in the present and past tense of feminine and neuter verbs, esnā, to break, nīn isdī (feminine) thou breakest; ād isī (feminine and neuter) she, it breaks; nīn iskī (feminine), thou brokest; nīm iskī (neuter), you broke. In verbs the root of which ends in the double ee, the latter change into double ii, the first being long, the second short : īi; however this rule applies only to feminine and neuter verbs of the present tense, second and third person, singular number : e.g., ḍē'enā, to be ; khē'enā, to die ; hē'enā, to bind ; nē'enā, to ask ; nīn ḍī'īḍī, thou art ; nīn khī'īḍī, thou diest ; nīn hī'īḍī thou bindest ; nīn nī'īḍī, thou askest ; but ād bi'ī, she, it is ; āikkhī'ī, she, it dies, etc. When a verb begins with the vowel e, the noun of agency takes i ; e.g., esnā, to break, isū, breaker ; ērnā, to see ; īrū seer. These latter changes may be due however to the following i and ū respectively.

* The hiatus in Kurukh words when written in Dēvanāgarī letters cannot be properly represented by the visarg, as it is not an aspirate, but simply a break, which in Dēvanāgarī may well be marked by using a capital letter for the initial vowel of the syllable which follows after the hiatus; e.g., एकअम, ēk'am; सुचया śuc'ā; तेषोरो teṅro'ō.

Long ī changes into short i : piṭna, piṭkan, I killed.

Both short and long o change into short u, and frequently the long ō changes into short o ; e.g., ottnā, to touch, uttkan, I touched ; mōkhnā, to eat, mokkan, I ate ; ōgnā, to swim, ugkan, I swam.

Long ō changes also into long ū : khōrnā, to sprout, khūrkan I did sprout.

The long ū changes into short u : kūrṇā, to be hot, kuttkan, I was hot.

Short and long o in combination with y change into short o : khōynā. khosskan, I reaped ; khōynā, khōjkan, I measured.

Final long ō, ū, ā and ī always become short, when their position is altered by the addition of a consonant ; e.g. : akkū, akkun, now ; merkhā, heaven, merkhan (accusative case). In the noun of agency the long and short ō of the verb is always changed into long and short u : hūs from hō'onā, to take away ; unus from onnā, to eat.

In poetry whenever the first word of a line begins with a vowel, this must be preceded by an n for the sake of euphony ; e.g., if the sentence begins with the word ayō, mother, it will be pronounced mayō.

§ 12. The changes which consonants undergo in the conjugation of the verb in the past tenses are very numerous ; for example, the aspirated ch elides the final h : cēchnā, cēckan, I pounded ; g changes into k : ollagnā, ollakkan, I accosted ; j is doubled : ijnā, ijjkan, I stood. Double kk or kkh becomes single : pokkhnā, pukkan, I blistered my hand ; kh always changes into k after a and o : mōkhnā, mokkan, I ate ; s is changed into double tt : khosnā, khottkan, I dug ; pesnā, pettkan, I picked up.

Many verbs, as ānnā, to say, ērnā, to see, form the past tense first person by inserting k between the root of the verb and its termination, ān-k-an (ānkan) I said, īrkan, I saw : but whenever the root of the verb ends in a vowel or diphthong, e is put before the k, for the sake of euphony: kirta'anā, kirtāckan, I returned; hē'ena, hēckan, I bound; hō'ona, ockan, I took away. The semivowel y changes into j or double ss, e.g., kḥōynā: kḥojkan, I measured; kḥōynā: kḥ'asskan, I reaped; also when two vowels stand together, the latter vowel changes into double ss: pḥēnā, possā, it rained; uinā, usskan, I ploughed. Further in all words which are borrowed from Hindī, in whatever consonant their root may terminate, e generally precedes the k: sēwnā, sēwckan, I served; paḥnā, paḥckan, I read; likhnā, likhckan, I wrote.

C.—Accentuation.

§ 13. In words which have only two syllables the accent is always on the first: puddā, short; bāckā, word. In words of three syllables the verbs have generally the accent on the second syllable, tisignā to open, kirta'anā, to return; except in those which end in ba'anā, e.g., guchāba'anā, which take the accent on the third syllable. There are rare instances of verbs of three syllables having the accent on the first: nisigna, to dress a wound; nedeḡnā, to fall off, are examples.

Adverbs, however, as a rule take the accent on the first syllable, even though they are of three or four syllables except when they are compounds, like nelbenjā, the day after to-morrow, mundbhāre, ahead, etc.; in these the accent is on the first syllable of the second word, that is the second syllable of the compound word. Most of the nouns with three syllables (dumbari, fig tree) or with four syllables (dārhimissi, beard) have the accent on the first syllable; seldom on the second (ḥarandō, whirlwind); and very rarely on the third (darbehār, removed).

CHAPTER III.

NOUNS.

A.—Number and Gender.

§ 14. There are only two numbers in Kurukh, singular and plural; strictly speaking, however, number as well as gender is, to the Kurukh, a distinction which he can only make with regard to nouns indicating rational beings. All irrational existences have to his grammatical conception neither gender nor number. It is true that he has forms to denote a plurality in neuter nouns; but in the conjugation of verbs influenced by such nouns, he treats them like nouns in the singular number. As to gender, I follow the division made by the Rev. E. Droese in his grammar of the Mältö language, viz., masculine, feminine and neuter. The number of the two former is very limited, since the Kurukh regards as masculine and feminine only such words as denote rational beings; all other nouns are to him devoid of gender, whether they are animate or inanimate. Thus with regard to gender it may be said of the Kurukh as has been said of his cousin, the Pahāriā or Māl: "he betrays a very unimaginative turn of mind." To the Kurukh only men are masculine; women and goddesses (evil spirits) are feminine, the one good spirit even making no exception; all other nouns are neuter.

§ 15. Masculine nouns of the third person singular have two forms, the indefinite and the definite. The indefinite is the simplest form of the noun, thus āl, man. The definite form is made by adding as for the singular, thus ālas, the man. The nominative plural third person is formed by adding the syllable ar to the indefinite singular form, thus ālar, men and the men, there being no separate form for the definite plural. Definite nouns, however, always require a pronoun, demonstrative or otherwise, and only indefinite nouns are employed as they stand; e.g., āl gahi śiā, the soul of man; ālar gē khē'enā ra'i, men must die; ort ālas baroas, a (certain) man came; nik'im (ālar) barcar, some (certain) men came; ibrā ālarin hōā, take these men away. The two terminations as and ar are in reality the singular and the plural of the pronoun of the third person, which are ās, he and ar, they, respectively. Examples: Gollar urb mannar, Landlords are rich; gollas kecas, the Landlord died. Urbar onālaguar, the masters are having their meals; urbas mekhāblas, the master calls.

In the first person no distinction is made between definite or indefinite; thus ēn urban, ēn gollan, may mean, I am a master, a Landlord, and also I am the master and the Landlord. Ēn alan and ēm ālām means: I am a man and we are men, respectively. In the second person we may say indiscriminately nin al ra'adai and nin ālay, either denoting thou art a man; similarly nin urbay talday and nin urbay, meaning either thou art a master or master.

§ 16. Feminine nouns have only the indefinite form; their plural is formed by adding either the masculine plural ending ar or the collective postposition guṭhiar to the indefinite: mukkā, woman, mukkar, women; ālī, wife, āliguṭhiar wives. The latter is also used in connection with masculine nouns when the plural stands in a collective sense; thus the Kurukh says: Ād ālarguṭhiar gusan ra'ī, she is with the men, and ās āliguṭhiar ganē kādas, he goes with the women. There is another plural form for both masculine and feminine nouns, viz., baggar, derived from baggē, many, to which the masculine and feminine plural ending ar is added. It is employed when a plurality of relatives is to be denoted, viz., dādābaggar, elder brothers. A third form of the plural we find in kharrā, sprout, which is, however, used exclusively in connection with the word children, whether these are male or female, viz., khaddkharrā, offspring. None of the above plural endings, viz., ar, guṭhiar, baggar and kharrā should ever be employed in connection with neuter nouns, which form their plural by adding guṭhi to the indefinite singular: aḍḍō, ox, aḍḍōguṭhi, oxen; man, tree, manguṭhi, trees. On the other hand, guṭhi must never be applied to substantives which are either masculine or feminine, except in the sense of a double plural in the feminine, e.g., mukkarguṭhi; in connection with the masculine plural form, guṭhi is thus used similarly to the Hindi lōg, ālarguṭhi, men. On the use of "guṭhi" in the sense of an adverb, see § 160.

§ 17. Singular and plural endings :—

	Masculine.	Feminine.	Neuter.
Sing.	as (def.),	—	—
Pl.	ar, guṭhiar,	ar, guṭhiar, guṭhi,	guṭhi.
	baggar, kharrā ,	baggar, kharrā .

The meaning of guṭhi is “whole” from gōṭā, whole ; that of baggar is “the many,” “from baggē, many. The same distinction of these three genders will appear further on in the pronouns and the conjugation of the verb. It must be noted, however, that though the Kurukh has for the masculine and the feminine one and the same plural, or, in other words, a common gender in the plural, he has no singular for the feminine but uses the neuter singular instead of it. Thus, strictly speaking, there are only two genders in Kurukh, viz., masculine and neuter, because each woman taken alone is treated grammatically as a thing or chattel ; but when he refers to them in the plural, the Kurukh uses the masculine form for them as well as for men. Yet for this latter reason, and because there are in the pronoun special feminine forms and in the verb distinctly feminine inflections, we deem it more appropriate to divide the Kurukh gender into masculine, feminine and neuter.

§ 18. The number of masculine and feminine nouns being so very small in Kurukh, the principal of them are given below :—

List of masculine with corresponding feminine nouns

Ālas	(def.), man ;	ālī , woman, wife.
Mētas	„ husband ;	mukkā and khai , woman, wife.
Bābas	„ father ;	ayō , mother.
Kukōs	„ boy ;	kuko'e , girl.
Kukōkhadd	„ male child ;	kuko'e khadd , female child.
Lēlēkhaddas , or lelles	„ male baby ;	lellē khadd , female baby.
Jaunkhaddis	„ son-in-law ;	khedḍō , daughter-in-law.
Dharmēs	„ god ;	dharmē , goddess.
Nādas	„ devil ;	nād , demon, evil spirit, (fem.)

Dharmēs and nādas are not used as masculine words except by Christian Orāos. Non-Christians look upon God and the devil as being feminine only.

Bēlus , (def) king ;	Ūrī , queen.
Jōkhas , ,, servant,	pellō servant (fem.)
Bisahas , ,, wizard ;	bisāli , witch.
Dēōras , ,, sorcerer ;	dēōrā , sorceress.
Urbas , ,, master ;	urbnī , lady, mistress ; also munḍrī or unḍrī .
Naigas , ,, priest ;	naigni , the wife of the priest.

REMARK. The ending nī in urbnī and naigni, is apparently borrowed from the Hindī Grammar, c f., gharnī, landlady.

Special masculine and feminine nouns.

§ 19. When in speaking of irrational beings or neuter nouns, it is desirable to denote sex, the Kurukh prefixes to neuter nouns indicating quadrupeds and birds, the words aṇḍrā, male and buṛhi, female ; e.g., aṇḍrā lakṛā male tiger, buṛhi lakṛā, tigress ; so aṇḍrā kiss, boar ; aṇḍrā osgā, mouse, etc. For sheep and goats the Kurukh employs the word bokrā to denote the male : bokrā mēṛhō, ram and bokrā ēṛā, he goat. For buffalo mankhā, haṛṛā and bhaīs are used respectively ; for dog allā, kuttalā and kuttiallā, bitch. In the case of birds kokrō is used for cock and kaṭṛī for hen ; thus kokrō murkḥur, cock-pigeon and kaṭṛī murkḥur, hen-pigeon ; gayā khēr, castrated cock. Almost all these prefixes are, however, apparently borrowed from the Hindī vocabulary, and the distinction therefore is not originally a Kurukh one.

B.—Case and Declension.

A. CASE.

§ 20. There are seven cases in Kurukh and only one declension. The genitive case is formed by adding the post position gahi to the nominative of the noun, definite or indefinite : āl gahi, of man, ālas gahi, of the man, ālar gahi, of the men. Another form of the genitive or rather possessive case is ntā, with the exclusive sense of belonging to locally; for which reason ntā may be considered a locative; e.g., paddā, village, paddantā, of the village, or belonging to the village; iyā, here, iyantā, of this; iyantā amm, the water of this place; paddantā ālar, the people of the village.

In the dative the postposition gē is added: āl gē and ālas gē, to the man.

The sign of the accusative is an when the noun ends in a consonant; after a vowel it is n; in the definite form of the noun masculine singular and plural and in the feminine plural it is in; example: ālan, man, ālasin, the man, ālarin, the men; mukkan, the woman, mukkarin, the women. Erpan, the house, erpāguthin, the houses.

The sign of the ablative is tī and ntī; the latter form being used in nouns ending with a vowel for the sake of euphony; e.g., ālas tī, from the man, ālintī, from the woman. The sign of the ablative may be added to the accusative as well as to the nominative, as in ālarintī, erpāguthintī. This n in the ablative therefore is used most probably only by way of euphony. If this be so, then the real form of the possessive-locative nta spoken of above would be tā. As to the combination of the ablative with the locative, see § 85 on participles and the syntax § 156.

The instrumental case signs are trī and trū.

In the locative the postposition nū in, on, is added to the nominative: ālas nū, in the man, merkḥā nū, in heaven. In some localities where Kurukh is spoken it is nō; also in Māltō.

§ 21. In the vocative ō, ay and ayō are suffixed to the nouns: e.g., urb, master; urbay, urbayō, O master! urbarō, O masters! mukkaiō, O women! There is no vocative form for the plural of neuter nouns.

Besides the vocative suffix the interjection ē or ana, is prefixed: ē urbaiō, or ana urbayō, O master! In the feminine nouns both suffix and prefix undergo a change: the final a of the former becoming ai, ē mukkai, O woman! (in the singular only) and the final a of the latter also changing into ai, anai mukkai. There is a further change of this prefix ana when women talk to women, viz., ān khai, O daughter! and anē khaiḡuthiarō, O daughters!

CHAPTER IV.

ADJECTIVES.

A.—General remarks.

§ 25. The number of adjectives in Kurukh is not very large, many of them having several different meanings ; thus for example kōrē means good, healthy, well-behaved, etc. Most adjectives in Kurukh are simply nouns of quality added to substantives just as they are, without regard to gender, number or case. Thus mechā, high, also means height ; mechā partā, a high mountain ; partā gahi mechā nū, on the top of the mountain ; khēsō, red, means blood and also the red colour ; conhā is love, attachment, but also beloved and attached ; kharkhā, bitter and bitterness ; pannā, iron, panna tarri, an iron sword ; cācā, stone, cācā khal, a stony field.

B.—On the formation of adjectives.

§ 26. Adjectives in Kurukh are therefore formed by simply prefixing one noun to another. Such combinations of course might be looked upon as compound nouns, because cācā khal could be translated stone-field ; kark erpa wooden house and wood-house.

Verbal adjectives are formed (a), by putting the infinitive form of the verb before the noun which is to be qualified ; e.g., kurnā, burning : kurnā amm, hot or burning water ; munjrnā, to end or to perish : munjrnā ujnā, perish ing or perishable life ; onnā, to eat, eating : onnā ālō, eatable things ; (b), by prefixing the form of the past participle to the qualified noun : ankā katha a spoken word ; keckā ālar, dead people ; nanjkā nalakh work done ; khotrkā ari, broken vessel ; tōbrkā cic, extinguished fire ; (c), by adding the noun of agency : irū ālās, the man who sees ; the boy who knows akhu kukkos, the meaning is : a clever boy ; pārū pellō, the girl who sings.

By adding the adverb lekhā, like (an Aryan loan word) to a noun and putting these before the noun to be qualified we obtain another kind of adjective, which is used most extensively in the Kurukh language, thereby replenishing their poor stock of adjectives. Examples : An Urāo distinguishes only between three different colours, viz., red, white and black : khēsō, pandrā and mokhārō. If he is pressed for a specialisation of other colours, he has recourse to the adverb lekhā and combines it with one of these words ; thus he will call yellow, khēsō lekhā, reddish ; dark green, mokhārō lekhā, blackish ; and ash grey, pandrā lekhā, whitish.

Another mode of forming adjectives is by prefixing or suffixing the negative adverb mal, malā and malkā, thus a barren woman is rendered by khadd malkā ālī, lit., child not having woman ; munjāmalka, endless ; malnunjrnā, unperishable ; dhibāmalkā, to be without money, poor ; lūrmalkā, unwise, stupid ; mal saungiyā, to be without strength, weak. A corresponding positive is made up by adding the noun of agency to another qualifying noun ; e.g., lūr uiyu ālas, a clever man, lit., a wisdom having man ; ṭākā uiyu ālas, a rich man, lit., a rupee holding man ; sawang uiyu, mighty, lit., one who holds authority. By adding the sign of the possessive case ntā to a noun for the purpose of qualification, another kind of adjectives is formed, e.g., erpantā nēgeār homely custom, lit. custom belonging to the house ; merkhantā bābos, the heavenly father, i.e., who is in heaven ; ullantā nalakh, daily work ; pūrbantā alar, oriental men, men belonging to the east ; khēkhēlantā ālō, earthly things.

C.—Comparison.

§ 27. The mode of comparison in Kurukh is very simple ; the noun or pronoun to be compared is put in the nominative, and the noun or pronoun with which it is compared is put in the ablative, in the same way as in Hindī : Urbas jōkhas tī kōhā taldas, the master is greater than the servant. Nin engantī sannī taldei, thou art smaller than I.

The superlative is formed in the same way, only the comparison is made by the word "all," ormar (masc. and fem.) and urmi (neuter), instead of or along with the noun or pronoun to be compared : Ās ormartī kōhā talyas, he is the greatest of all ; ād orma mukharī kōhā ra'ī, she is greater than all the women. I man urmi mangūhintī sannī talī, this tree is the smallest of all.

There are two other and perhaps more original ways of comparison in Kurukh: the first is by putting the substantive with which the subject is to be compared into the locative case: e.g., among his brethren even he was great: taṅghai dadarnū āsim kōhā ra'acas; and, secondly, by contrasting the nominative to be compared; e.g., not this, but that one is great: āsim malā hūsim kōhā taldas.

D.—List of the most common adjectives.

§ 28. Dau, good; malḍau, bad, lit. not good; daulekhā, fairly good. Kōrē, healthy; malkōrē, ill, lit. not well; puddā, short; dīghā, long; mechā, high; punnā, new; paccā, old; bōlō, soft; carrā, bare, bald; ḍoḍō, foolish; laṅḍiā, lazy; gechā, far; cākhā, near; hissī, fair; konkō bonkō, crooked; urb, rich; kirā, poor, hungry; kocrō, narrow; kōkā, dumb, idiotic; kollam, penitent; khasrā, dirty, leprous; kharkhā, bitter; tīnī, sweet; khissī, bright; khonkhā, deep; lepā, thin; ludū, gentle; marakhā, soiled; munō, excellent; nagad, nice, pretty; nīdī, empty; othā, heavy; nebbā, light; pairī, early; panjkā, ripe; paṅkō, unripe; paṅgē, clear; peccā, diligent; pokkō, swollen, puffed up; porcō, half boiled; rijhā, fat; sannī, small; kōhā, great; sirsitā, slender; siṅhiyā, easy; thaukā, right; tīnā, right hand; ḍabbā, left; tiṅḍī, firm; thōthā, naked; ujgō, straight.

CHAPTER V.

PRONOUNS.

1. Personal Pronoun,

A.—Case signs.

§ 29. Strictly speaking, the personal pronoun of the Kurukh language has only two persons, first and second, the personal pronoun third person being really the demonstrative pronoun, thus ās kēras, ār kērar, means not exactly, he went, they went, but rather, that one, those ones went.

The declension of the pronoun is similar to that of the noun, with the following deviations in the first and second person.

1. The nominative singular is not the stem of the pronoun, the stem being eng or ing in the first person, ning in the second person, and nanig in the collective plural.

2. Consequently, it will be observed that the signs of the oblique cases are added to the stem and not to the nominative form.

3. The suffix of the genitive is not gahi as in the noun, but hai, the latter being affixed to the stem eng-enghai, my or mine; stem ning and hai-ninghai, thy or thine; stem tanig and hai-tanighai, singular, tanighai his. The suffix of the dative case is ā and āgē instead of gē in the dative case of the noun: engā and engāgē, to me. The accusative sign an is the same as in nouns with this deviation that it is never changed, engan, me. The ablative case has tī or antī: engtī or engantī, from me. The instrumental case has the corresponding trī or trū, eng trī, by or through me. The locative also adds its case sign to the stem: engnū, in me.

§ 30. The plural case signs of the first and second persons are the same as those of the singular, while the plural signs of the third person exactly correspond with the plural case signs of the noun, but all of them are added to the nominative and not to the stem, except one of the two collective plural forms, vis., nanghāi, our, and nanigāgē, to us, which add their case signs to the stem.

The Kurukh language has a double plural in the first person, viz., ēm and nām. The former is used when the party addressed is excluded, and the latter when the party addressed is included; if this peculiarity is not strictly observed, a different sense will be conveyed from what is intended, e.g., if one of a dinner party were to call out to the servant: maṇḍī ondr'ā nām ḍnōt, bring the dinner, we will eat! this would include the servant and convey to him an invitation; the sentence therefore should be maṇḍī ondr'ā, ēm ḍnōm.

The plural forms for the third person of neutral pronouns are ibrā and abrā, not ār, as for masculine and feminine pronouns.

Loc.	ār nū , in them.	abrā nū , in those.

2. Demonstrative Pronoun.

§ 32. As has been already stated, the third person of the personal pronoun, masculine and feminine, is in reality the remote demonstrative pronoun. The proximate form for the masculine singular is is (definite), and for the feminine and neuter id, the plural of the former being īr, which is also used for the feminine, while the plural of the neuter is iḥrā; the remote demonstrative being ās, ād, ār and abrā, of which the declension has been given above. The declension of the proximate is given below :—

	through, by		through, by these	„ „	these „

§33. When the demonstrative pronoun precedes a singular noun, its indefinite singular forms are used for all the three genders, viz., in lieu of the near definite, īs and īd, ī is used; instead of the remote definite ās and ād, the indefinite ā is employed; e.g., ā ālasin ērā, see that man; ī mukkan ērā, see this woman; ā aḍḍon ērā, see that ox.

On the other hand, when the demonstrative pronoun precedes a plural noun, its neuter plural form is used, viz., ibrā, for near and abrā, for remote demonstratives: ibrā ālarin hōā, take these men away; abrā mukkarin hōā, take those women away; ibrā aḍḍōguthin hōā, take these oxen away. Ibrā and abrā are made up of the demonstrative ī and ā and brā, meaning those ones; compare the Kanarese avaṛu and avaṛa, those ones.

There is another form for the remote demonstrative pronoun, which is used when remoteness is to be emphasized, viz., hūs for ās, that man there, hūd, for ād that woman (or irrational being) there; hūr for ār, those men (or women) there; and hubrā for abrā, those (things, etc.) there. Before singular nouns the indefinite form ū is used in all the three genders: ū ālas īī, from that man there; ū mukkantī, from that woman there; ū manantī, from that tree there. Ū is probably borrowed from the Gaūwārī or low Hindī. Hūd, hūs, hūr, hubrā is also an emphatic demonstrative, generally accompanied by a nodding of the head or a sign made by the hand.

Preceding plural nouns, the indefinite of this remote demonstrative pronoun takes hubrā for each gender, e.g., hubrā ālarin mēkhā, call those men there; hubrā mukkarin mēkhā, call those women there; hubrā khērguṭhin ondr'a, bring those fowls there.

		Masculine.	Feminine.
		Neuter.
N.	hūr , those men	(women).	hubrā , those things.
G.	hūrgahi , of those men	„	hubrāgahi , of those things.
D.	hūr gē , to those men	„	hubrāgē , to those things.
Acc.	hūrin , those men	„	hubran , those things.
Abl.	hūrtī , hūrintī , from those men	„	hubrantī , from those things.
Intr.	hūrtrī , trū , by those men	„	hubran trī , trū , by those things.
Loc.	hūr nū , in those men	„	hubrā nū , in those things.

3. Possessive Pronouns.

§35. The genitives of the personal and demonstrative pronouns stand for possessives and of course are used also as adjectives—

First person.	Second person.	Third person.
Sing. enghai , my.	nirghui , thy.	āsgahi , his; ādigahi , her, its.
Pl. emhai , our.	nimhai , your.	ārgahi , their (remote).
		abrāgahi , their („).
		irgahi , their (near).
„ { namhai } our.		ibrāgahi , their („), (neuter).
„ { narighai }

In connection with nouns ibrā and abrā are used when a collective sense is to be implied, e.g., ibrā ālar gahi erpā, the house of all these men; abrā mukkar gahi kicrī, the garments of all those women.

§ 36. Possessive pronouns may be used as nouns. Accordingly the genitive of the personal and demonstrative pronouns has a declension.

First person.

		Singular.
N.	enghai ,	my own (people or property).
G.	enghai gahi ,	of my own ditto.
D.	enghai gē ,	to my own ditto.
Acc.	enghain ,	my own ditto.
Abl.	enghaintī ,	from my own ditto.
Instr.	enghain trī , trū ,	by my own ditto.
Loc.	enghai nū ,	in my own ditto.

First plural.

emhai,	our own (people or property).
emhai gahi,	of our own ditto.
emhai gē,	to our own ditto.
emhain,	our own ditto.
emhainti,	from our own ditto.
emhain tri, trū,	by our own ditto.
emhai nū,	in our own ditto.

Collective plural.

namhai, namghai,	our own (people or property).
namhai gahi, namghai gahi,	of our own ditto.
namhai gē, namghai gē,	to our own ditto.
namhain, namghain,	our own ditto.
namhainti, namghainti,	from our own ditto.
namhain tri, trū	by our own ditto.
namhai nū, namghai nū	in our own ditto.

§ 37. Second person.

Singular.

N.	ninghai,	thy own (people or property).
G.	ninghai gahi,	of thy own ditto.
D.	ninghai gē,	to thy own ditto.
A.	ninghain,	thy own ditto.
A. & I.	ninghainti, trū,	from, by thy own ditto.
L.	ninghai nū,	in thy own ditto.

Plural.

nimhai,	your own (people or property).
nimhai gahi,	of your own ditto.
nimhai gē,	to your own ditto.
nimhain,	your own ditto.
nimhainti, trū,	from, by your own ditto.
nimhai nū,	in your own ditto.

Third person.

For the third person the reflexive pronoun (which see later on) is used except in the accusative, ablative and locative case of either gender.

Examples—

Ēn niṅhaintī hōon, I will take from thy own.

Ās gahin menā, hear him, i.e., his words; irgahin hōā, take away their belongings; ār gahin hebr'ā, throw away the belongings of those.

The genitive of the plural form guthiar and guthi of course may also be substantized and declined, viz., ārguṭhiar gahin hōā, take away the belongings of all those; īd abrāguṭhi gahin mokha, this (neuter) has eaten the thing which belongs to those, (neuter).

Before words denoting relatives the possessive pronoun is not prefixed in full, but only the stem, which is compounded with the noun into one word; e.g., embas, our father; nimbās, your father, etc. For a full list of these words see the Syntax § 145.

4. Reflexive pronoun.

§ 39. The reflexive pronouns are tān, self, one's own; and its plural tām. They are used quite similarly to the Hindi āp, apnā self, one's self, one's own, and stand with their different case forms as substitutes for the possessive pronoun third person, whenever it is connected with or represents such pronoun standing in the nominative case.

Declension.

Singular.	Plural.
N. tān , himself, herself, itself, one's own.	tām , themselves, own.
G. taṅghai , of himself, of herself, of itself, own.	tānhai , of themselves, own.
D. taṅgāgē taṅgā , to himself, to herself, of itself, of own.	tamāgē tamā , to themselves, own.
Acc. taṅgan , himself, herself, itself, own.	taman , themselves, own.
A. & I. taṅgantī, trū , from, by himself, herself, itself, own.	tāmtī, trū , from, by themselves, own.
L. taṅg nū , in himself, herself, itself own.	tām nū , in themselves, own.

Examples—

Gen. as tanghai erpā kēras, he went to his (own) house.

Dat. ar tangāgē bidyar, they searched for themselves.

Acc. ad tangan lauca, she beat herself.

Abl. ābrā tāmlī keccā, they (neuter) died of themselves.

Loc. ar tām tām nū bācar, they said among themselves.

§ 40. For the sake of emphasis im is added to the reflexive pronoun tān, thus, as tānim kēras, he went himself, he himself went. Remark: On the use of tān without the personal pronoun see § 148.

As to the reflexives of the first and second person it must be observed that the different cases of the personal pronouns are used as substitutes, viz.:—

ēn enghai erpā kirkan, I went to my (own) house.

ēm emāgē bidkam, we searched for ourselves.

nām naman ērōt, we will see ourselves.

nīn ningti ēkā, walk from, i.e., of thyself.

nīm nīm nū beddā, seek among yourselves.

nīm nimhai erpa kolā, go to your (own) home.

For the first and second persons the personal pronouns serve as reflexives: ēn enghan laudan, I beat myself; nīn ningan laudai, thou beatest thyself; ēm eman laudan, we beat ourselves; nīm niman laudar, you beat yourselves; nām naman laudat, we (collectively) beat ourselves.

The repetition of the personal pronouns has also the force of a reflexive ēm ēm nū, means, among ourselves; nīm nīm nū, among yourselves; ār tāw tām nū kacnākrālagyar, they were talking among themselves.

5. Interrogative pronouns.

§ 41. There are five interrogative pronouns in Kurukh, viz.:—

Nē and ēkā, both meaning “who?” and “which?” and endr, endra and ēkdā meaning “what?” and “which?”

Nē is always used indefinitely except when repeated: nē nē means whosoever. Nē as an interrogative stands only for masculine and feminine nouns; it is treated, however, as being neuter, even though it may stand for a masculine noun; see example below;—

ēkā is always used definitely in connection with nouns or their substitutes; it is applicable to all genders.

Thus nē barca, who came? but “what man came?” must be rendered ēkā ālas barcas? Nē. nē barcar, whosoever came. See § 51. Nē is the nominative of the stem nēk, the declension of which is given below:—

Singular and Plural.

- § 42. N. nē, who, which : ād nē tali, also ād nē ra’i? who is she?
G. nēkhai, whose : īd nēkhai erpā ra’i, whose house is this?
D. nēkāgē, to whom : nēkāgē or nēkā cickai, to whom did you give?
Acc. nēkan, whom : nēkan lauckar, whom did you beat?
A. & I. nēkantī, nēktī, from, by whom : nēkantī khakhkai, from whom did you get?
Loc. nēk nū, in whom : nēk nū khakhhor, in whom will you find?

Ēkā is not declinable, nor does it change its final vowel before different genders: ēkā ālas barcas, ēkā ālī barca, ēkā addō barca, who, i.e., what man, woman, etc., came? ēkā man khatrā, what tree fell? ēkā ālas gahi erpā, what man’s house? ēkā mukkāgē cickai, to which woman hast thou given? ēkk man nū nerr tah, on which tree is the snake?

Ēkā being connected with ort, one (masc. and fem.) another definite interrogative for who is formed; nīn ēkā ortai? who are you? what particular person are you? As ēkā ortas? who is he? Lit. what a one is he? Ād ēkā ortī? who is she? i.e., who is she likely to be?

Before words signifying relatives in the genitive case the form ēkā is not commonly prefixed as before other nouns, but a shortened form of the genitive of the interrogative pronoun is applied, i.e., nēk instead of the genitive case; thus, nēk tangdai taldai, whose son art thou? nēk tambas talyas, whose father is he? nēkhai tangdai taldai and nēkhai tambas talyas, would be considered ambiguous.

- § 43. Endr is declined like nē:—

Singular and Plural.

N.	endr,	what.
G.	endr gahi,	of what.
D.	endr gē,	to what.
A	endran,	what.
A. & I.	endrāti, trū, endranti,	from, by what.
Loc.	endr nū,	in what.

Endr is indefinitely used in an abstract sense. Endr ra'ī, what's the matter? Endr ātī barcā, what (kind of) woman came? It stands for all genders, viz., Ās endr ālas talyas, what (kind of) man is he? Endr bīnkō ethrā, what (kind of) star appeared?

Endr is also used as an exclamation of surprise: endr ās argā barcas, what, has he not come yet?

Endr in combination with kā, or, is even used as a disjunctive: endr mukkar ra'anan kā mētar talyar ārin ormārin ēd'ā, whether they be women or men, call them all! Endr urbar kā kīrar ormar khēor, whether rich or poor, all will die. The kā (or) may also be dispensed with and endr repeated in order to convey the same disjunctive sense, viz., endr mētar endr mukkar ormārin kōrā ciā, whether men or women, let them all come in Like ēkā so endr is used also as an adverb or adverbial phrase, e.g., īd endr lekham ra'ī, what is this like? Nīn endrgē barckai? Why (for what) didst thou come?

§ 44. Endrā, what, is used only definitely: endrā ra'ī, what is it? Endrā bāon, what shall I say?

N.	endrā,	what.
G.	endrā gahi,	of what.
D.	endrā gē,	to what.
A.	endran,	what.
A. & I.	endrāti, trū,	from, by what.
L.	endrā nu,	in what.

The difference between endr and endrā will be seen from the following instances, viz., in connection with the nominative, genitive, dative, ablative and locative cases.

1. Ās endr manos, what will become of him? But ās endrā manos, what will he be like? The former referring to condition, the latter to quality.

2. Īd endr gahi ra'ī? What is the cause of this? But īd endrā gahi ra'ī, of what kind is this?

3. Ād endrtī kamrkī ra'ī by what has this been made? Referring to the action by which the thing has been made; but īd endrā tī kamrkī ra'ī, refers to the article out of which a certain thing has been made.

4. Endr gē kāon, meaning why should I go? But endrā gē kāon, means what for should I go? Endr is used both for cause and purpose endrā implies only purpose.

5. Endr nū khakhon, in what shall I find? refers to the action or cause, by which a certain object is to be found, but endrā nū khakhon? refers to the place or condition in which that thing may be found.

§ 45. There is a special form of the dative case for the indefinite interrogative, endr and endrā, viz., endrnā, why, wherefore or what for: endrnā kāov, why, wherefore or what for should I go? It is used when prohibition, censure or hindrance is implied, e.g., nīn endrnā kāo'e, why should you go? i.e., you ought not to go; ēn endrnā mal mōkhon, why should I not eat? i.e., there is no hindrance. Nīm endrnā kirkar, why did you go? i.e., you ought not to have gone.

§ 46. Ēkdā, which one, is a definite interrogative pronoun, used for neuter substantives only.

The declension endings are the same as in the noun, viz. :—

Singular and Plural.

N.	ēkdā ,	what, which.
G.	ēkdā gahi ,	of what.
D.	ēkdā gē ,	to what.
Acc.	ēkdan ,	what, which.
A. & I.	ēkdantī trū ,	from by what.
Loc.	ēkdā nū ,	in what.

§ 47. Ēkdā is employed for endr and endrā whenever a certain irrational object is distinctly understood.

Its use will be seen from the following sentences: Ēkdā barca, which one came? (A number of the same kind being understood); īd Ēkdā gahi tali, of which is this? (Other things of the same kind being understood); Ēkdāgē cion, to which one shall I give? i. e., to which one among other animals; Ēkdan cājkar, which one did you select? i. e., which out of certain things; Ēkdantī tārakai, with which one (e. g., axe) did you cut? Ēkdā nū ra'acā, in which one (vessels for example being understood), was it?

§ 48. There are some other indefinite interrogative pronouns, viz., ēbaggī (ēbaggē, ēbaggū); how many, how much? ēō and ēōdā, how many how much especially? and Ēkāssē, Ēkannē, how? Out of these ēō is especially used in connection with nouns denoting time: ēō cān, how many years? ēō bērā rā'ī, what o'clock is it? The difference between ēbaggī and its other forms and ēōdā seems to be that the former denotes quantity in general and the latter in particular: e. g., if it is asked, ēbaggē ālar barcar, how many men came? the attention is drawn to the general number; but by saying ēōdā ālar barcar? we have in mind the individuals of which that number is made up; again: ēbaggī kanik, how much fuel? ēbaggī tikhil, how much rice? refers to the general quantity, but ēōdā kanik and ēōdā tikhil refers to the units (measures, etc.) of which that quantity is made up. In exclamations of surprise both ēō and baggī are combined ēō baggī, how much! like the Hindī: kitnā bahut!

Ēbaggī and ēōdā may be turned into plural nouns by adding the case signs of the plural to them, e. g., nīm ēbaggir or ēōdar ra'adar, how many, i. e., how many persons are you? Ēōdā guṭhi barca, how many (oxen) have come?

§ 49. Ēbaggī and ēōdā are declined in the same manner as all other pronouns, viz., ēbaggī gahi, of how many, much? ēōgē, to how many much? ēbaggin (acc.) how many, much? ēōdāntī from how many, much? ēbaggī nū, in how many, much? e. g., ēbaggī gahi bārē nū āndai, of how many do you speak? ēōdāgē cickai, to how many did you give? ēbaggin ondrkai, how much did you bring? ēōdāntī biddkai, from how many did you ask? ēbaggī nū lekakho'e in how much will you find? Ēkāssē and Ēkannē have the meaning of "how", the former implying condition, the latter denoting manner. Examples: nīn Ēkāssē ra'adai, nīn Ēkannē ra'adai both meaning "how do you do?" but the former refers to the condition, the latter to the manner of living or doing; ēkāsē kā'o'e, ēkannē kā'o'e, how will you go? the former denotes the condition of, the latter the manner of going.

In the locative case ēkāsē and ēkannē stand as nouns; ēn ēkāsē nū ujjon or ēkannē nū ujjon, how shall I live? the former again referring to the condition and the latter to the manner of living.

6. Indefinite Pronouns.

§ 50. The indefinite pronouns in Kurukh are formed from the interrogative nē, ēkā and endr, viz., nīk'im, nīd'im, ēk'am and endr'am, indr'im.

These stand for both numbers, singular and plural: ēk'am is used before nouns and has different meanings: any one, ēk'am ortāsin mēkhā, call any one or ēk'am ortāsin (mas.) and ēk'am ortin (fem.) mēkhā; a certain: ēk'am torāng nū ontā kōhā lakṛā ra'acā, there was a big tiger in a forest; one: ēk'am ullā nū ennē manjā, it happened one day; some: ēk'am khīrī tengā, tell some story. Indr'im is also used before nouns only and has the meaning of "any one" (thing); indr'im manan tārā, cut any tree; endr'im, something: endr'im cī'ā, give something.

Nīk'im and nīd'im are always used as substitutes for nouns of both numbers; their meaning is "any one."

Nīk'im (or nīd'im) bar'ō, holē engan tengā, if any one comes, let me know.

Whosoever: nīk'im (or nīd'im) pattō or pattōr ār bacr'or, any one (i.e., whosoever) believes, will be saved. Somebody, a certain: nīk'im (or nīd'im) khīrī tengālagyā, somebody was telling stories. Nē nē and endr endr are likewise employed for whosoever and whatsoever: nē nē bar'ō, ārin mesā, whosoever will come, admit them. Endr endr manō, nam sak'ōt, whatsoever may happen, we shall suffer it.

Endr'im or endr'ādīm, anything: endr'ādīm monō holē tengā, if anything happens, tell me; endr'ādīm bar'ō, ādīm chēk'ā, whatsoever comes, stop it, literally, should anything come, stop it. Also indr'im manō; indr'im bar'ō.

§ 51. Declension of nēk'am, any one.

N.	nēk'am ,	any one, etc.
G.	nēkhaidim ,	of any one.
D.	nēk'am gē or nēk'āgem ,	to any one.
Acc.	nek'ānim ,	any one.
A.&I.	nēk'antī , nēk trū ,	from, by any one.
Loc.	nēk'im or nēkhai num ,	in any one.

Nēkhaidim tempān khakhkan, I found somebody's stick.

Nin nēkā'am (nēkāgem) ciškai, did you give to anybody?

Nēkānim ḡaherē nū khākhkai, did you find somebody on the road?

Nēkim'tī ebrā, from, or by whom, was it lost?

Ennē conhā nēkhai nū malā, such love is in no one, i.e., does not exist.

Declension of nīk'im and nīdim.

N.	nīk'im	nīd'im ,	any one, whosoever.
G.	nīk'im gahi	„ gahi ,	of any one, whomsoever.
D.	nīk'im gē	„ gē ,	to any one, whomsoever.
Acc.	nīk'im an	„ an ,	any one, whomsoever.
A.&I.	nīk'im tī , trū	„ tī , trū ,	from, by any one, whomsoever.
Loc.	nīk'im nū ,	„ nū ,	in any one, whomsoever.

* Remarks.—Nēk'im and nīk'im are used promiscuously.

§ 52. Declension of endr'ādīm, anything.

N.	endr'ādīm ,	anything.
G.	endr'am gahi , indr'im gahi ,	of anything.
D.	endr'amgē , indr'imgē	to anything.
Acc.	endr'ānim , indr'iman ,	anything.
A.&I.	endr'amtī , indr'imtī , trū	from, by anything.
Loc.	endr'am nū , indr'im nū ,	in anything.

Id indr'im gahi kamrkī ra'ī, this has been made of anything.

Ās gahi erpā nū endr'ingē addā mal khakhrā, there was not room for anything in his house.

§ 53. Other indefinite pronouns are:—

Some one or other : nīd'im, nīd'ingā : nīd'im nīd'im gusan gā dhibā manō, some one or other will have money

All : ormā, ormar, urmi, the first two for masculine and feminine only, the latter for feminine and neuter nouns.

Some or a little more : jokendr'im or endr'im jok, or jokim ; jokim jokim, very little.

Taman, many : taman ālar barcar, a multitude of men came.

Jokendr'im amm ci'ā, give some more water.

Something or other, indr'im, indr'ingā. Example : ā daharē nū kerkantī indr'im indr'ingā khakhrō, if you go that way, you will find something or other.

§ 54. The numerals with an indefinite pronominal sense are ort, one for masculine and feminine ; ontā, one for neuters : ort barcas, one came ; ontan ci'a, give one ; irbar (irbarim), irbarim barōr, both of them will come.

Nannā, other, nannas, the other (for masculine), nannar, plural, masculine and feminine. Nannā is used adjectively. Ēn nannā ullā nū ka'on. I will go on another day. Nannā may be used of course also bstantively.

	Singular.	Plural.
N.	nannā, nannas , other, the other.	nannar, nannāguṭhiar, nannāguṭhi , others, the others.
G.	nannā gahi, nannas gahi ,	nannargahi, nannāguṭhi gahi , of others.
D.	nannāgē, nannas gē ,	nannargē, nannāguṭhiargē, nannāguṭhigē , to others.
A.	nannan, nannasin ,	nannarin, nannāguṭhiarin, nannāguṭhin , others, others.
A. & T.	nannan, nannas tī, trū ,	nannarin, nannāguṭhiarin, nannāguṭhin from, by others.
L.	nanna, nannas nū ,	nannarnū, nannāguṭhiar nū , in others.

§ 55. By adding the emphatic postposition hō and the negative adverb malā we get the following indefinite pronouns: not one, not even one: ort hō malā for masculine and feminine; ontā hō malā for neuters; ort hō malā barcā, not even one has come; ecg gusan ontā hō malā, I have none, not even one.

7. Relative pronouns.

§ 56. There are no relative pronouns in Kurukh; whenever the Hindī (Gaṣwārī) relatives jā and sē are employed, it is done contrary to the idiom of the Kurukh language, which forms its relative and correlative sentences in a peculiar way, about which see the syntax § 170.

§ 57. List of personal pronouns and words derived therefrom.

A.—Personal pronouns.

Singular.		Plural.
1 person ēn ,	: I	ēm , we, nām , we and you.

CHAPTER VI.

THE VERB.

A.—Introductory remarks.

§ 62. In Kurukh nouns and adjectives are often used as verbs ; e.g., lassā, work for which wages are earned ; ēn lassā ka'adan, I am going to earn, to work for wages ; ās lasyas kēras, he went to earn, to work for wages ; ār lassā kāor, they will go to earn, to work for wages. Puddā, short ; īd puddō, this will shorten : be short ; i.e., will be too short ; īd puddyā, this is too short, turned out to be short. Kōhā, great ; ās kōhas, he is great ; nin kōhai, thou art great ; ēn kōhan, I am great. Urb, rich ; ēn urban, I am rich or Lord ; ār urbar, they are rich or masters. Even the participle is used infinitively, hēckā, participle of hē'ēnā : hēcka'anā, to be bound ; hēckāckan I have been bound ; hēckāor, they will be bound ; ka'anā, to go ; kerkā, participle : kerka'anā, to return or to have returned, kerkāckan, I have returned. Possibly these forms hēckāckan, kerkāckan, etc., are only abbreviated forms of the pluperfect.

Verbal nouns are used as adjectives ; pārnā pellō, a singing girl ; nālnā jōkhas, dancing youth ; munjnā ujnā, perishable life ; onnā ālō, eatable things. The past participle of a verb is used as an adjective as well as a noun : kundrkā, born, kundrkā khaddas, the born child ; ānkā, spoken, ānkā, the word. An adjectival participle used in connection with the word bīri, time, takes the suffix ō ; thus ōnō bīri, eating time ; kālō bīri, time for going ; khēō bīri, time of death. This adjectival participle is also made use of in connection with the word paddā, village, understood. Thus, Kudarkhō means the Kudarkhō village, the word paddā being understood. Kundō, the Kundō village ; Pallamō, the Palamō village.

§ 63. The Kurukh verb has only one conjugation, the terminations of which are alike in all tenses, excepting the past, which has four different endings. There are two voices, the Active and the Passive ; and five moods, viz., the Indicative, the Subjunctive and Conditional, the Imperative and the Infinitive.

The Kurukh verb has three principal tenses : the present indefinite, the historical past and the future ; and four sub-tenses, viz., the definite present, the imperfect, the perfect and the pluperfect.

There are three genders, the masculine, feminine and the neuter ; and two numbers, the singular and the plural.

§ 64. It must be borne in mind that in Kurukh only men are considered to be of the masculine gender and only women to be of the feminine gender, and that accordingly all irrational beings are neuter. It is further to be noted that when men speak to women or about women they treat them as equals and address them or talk about them as if they were of the masculine gender, except in the second and third person singular, for which alone the feminine form of the verb is used. It would be considered rather indecent if men were to speak about women or address a plurality of women, and they did not use the masculine form of the verb. On the other hand it would be very improper if women in addressing men were to talk about themselves or other women as being of the feminine gender ; thus even in this case women will figure as men and use the masculine form of the verb only, the third person singular excluded, for which they will employ the feminine. Consequently in the conjugation of the verb the form for the feminine gender is entirely reserved for the conversation of women among themselves, with the exception of the second and third person feminine singular, which men and women alike will always treat as feminine with regard to women.

Examples : Nin ekātarā ka'adai ? Whither are you going ? (Masculine). Nin ekātarā ka'adi ? (feminine). Ās ekātarā ka'adas ? Where is he going to ? Ād ekātarā kái ? (feminine). Nim ekātarā ka'adar ? Whither are you going ? is used also when men address women. Nim ekātarā ka'adai ? Where are you going to ? is used only among women. Ār ekātarā ka'anar ? Where are they going to ? used also in addressing women when the question is about other women ; and even women will say among themselves when speaking of other women if they ask the question in the presence of men : Ār ekātarā ka'anar ?

§ 65. The singular of the neuter verb is identical with the feminine singular number ; yet in the plural they differ from each other in so far as the Kurukh neuter verb has no plural at all ; for even if the Kurukh talks of a plurality of irrational beings, he treats them as if they were a single being only, even though he denotes this plurality by affixing the plural sign to the noun or uses the plural form of the pronoun. The second and third person plural neuter gender take therefore the form of the second and third person singular, feminine gender.

Example: Mānd aḍḍō, three oxen; onḍ aḍḍō one ox; mānd aḍḍō kōrcā, three oxen entered; abrā aḍḍō kōrcā, those oxen entered; aḍḍō guḥi kōrcā, the oxen entered.

§ 66. In analysing an inflected verb of the Kurukh language we find that it consists of three distinct parts, viz., the root or modified stem, the tense characteristic and the inflectional ending; the latter being nothing else but the pronoun or the modified form of a pronoun, with which the verb is connected. The following examples will illustrate this. We take the verb esna, to break. The tense characteristic for the present indefinite, masculine gender is da, which changes into na in the third person plural. Feminine and neuter verbs take da only in the second person; as for the first and third person, they simply add the pronoun or its modified form to the tense characteristic. Thus, ēn, I, es the root, āa, the tense characteristic, with the pronoun added = ēn esdan, I break. ās, he, es, the root, da, the tense characteristic and ās, he, the pronoun, being added ās esdas, he breaks. ēm, we, es, root, da the tense characteristic: ēm the pronoun being joined with da = dam: ēm esdam, we break. En, I (feminine) es, the root. and ēn, the pronoun preceding the root being added in repetition as an inflectional ending produce the word es'ēn: ēn es'ēn, I break; nīn, thou, es, da, the tense characteristic, and ai give nīn esdai, thou breakest. Nīm, you es-da-ār: esdar, you break; ār, they, es n-ār, they break; nām es-d-at, we and you break. It is impossible at the present to explain the original meaning of these tense characteristics or of all pronominal inflectional endings of the verb; however the above will be sufficient to show that in Kurukh as well as in other Dravidian languages the inflectional ending of the verb is a pronominal one.

§67. The tense characteristic for the past tense takes four different forms, dividing thus the Kurukh verbs into four classes, viz., for the masculine gender ka, ka, cka and jka and for feminine ā, yā, cā and j'ā; e.g., ēn eskan, I broke: es the root, ka the tense characteristic, and n the pronoun (ēn) affixed to the latter.

For the future the tense characteristic is the vowel o in all persons, numbers and genders; e.g., ēn es'on; es the root, o the tense characteristic, and ēn the pronoun combined with the latter, gives es'on, I will break.

The tense characteristic of the definite present is the consonant l which is placed between the modified stem of the verb and the tense characteristic of the indefinite present; e.g., ēn es'āldan, esā the modified stem, l the tense characteristic of the indefinite present, da the tense characteristic of the indefinite present, and n (ēn) the pronoun being added give es'āl-da-n = es'āldan, I am breaking.

The remaining tenses i.e., the imperfect, perfect and pluperfect, have no special tense characteristic, but are formed with the aid of auxiliary verbs, as will appear later on.

There is no past future in Kurukh form; see further on.

nīm es'or, you shall or will break.
ār es'ōr, they shall or will break.

NEUTER PLURAL III PERSON.

PRESENT DEFINITE TENSE.

§ 70. This tense has two different forms, the one being the original, which is used by people who have not been influenced by Hindī and the other being a Kurukhized Hindī form. The former takes as its tense characteristic the consonant l added to the modified stem of the verb, to which again the inflectional ending of the present indefinite is affixed; the latter is formed with the aid of the Hindī verb lagnā, to commence, to engage.

I. Masculine.

- Sing.* ēn es'āldan, I am breaking.
 „ nīn es'āldai, thou art breaking.
 „ ās es'āldas, he is breaking.
Pl. ēm es'āldam, we are breaking.
 „ nām es'āldat, we and you are breaking.
 „ nīm es'āldar, you are breaking.
 „ ār es'ālnar, they are breaking.

Feminine.

- es'āl'ēn*, I am breaking.
es'āl'dī, thou art breaking.
es'āl'i, she, it is breaking.
es'āl'ēm, we are breaking.
es'āldat, we and you are breaking.
es'āldai, you are breaking.
es'ālnai, they are breaking.

NEUTER III PERSON PLURAL

ibrā or abrā es'āl'i, they are breaking.

II. The root of the Hindi verb lagnā or Bihārī lagāb is inserted between the modified stem and the inflectional endings of the definite present.

Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing. ēn es'ālagdan :	ēn es'ālaḡ'ēn , I am breaking.
„ nīn es'ālagdai :	nīn es'ālaḡ'dī , thou art breaking.
„ ās es'ālagdas :	ād es'ālaḡ'i , he, she, it is breaking
Pl. ēm es'ālagdam :	ēm es'ālaḡ'ēm , we are breaking.
„ nām es'ālagdat :	nām es'ālaḡdat , we and you are breaking.
„ nīm es'ālagdar :	nīm es'ālagdai , you are breaking.
„ ār es'ālagnar :	ār es'ālagnai , they are breaking.

NEUTER III PERSON PLURAL.

ibrā or abrā es'ālag'i, they are breaking.

IMPERFECT TENSE.

§ 71. This tense apparently is not an original Kurukh one.

It is formed by adding the Kurukhized inflectional past of the Hindi verb lagnā to the modified stem of the verb, viz:—

Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing. ēn es'ālakkan :	ēn es'ālagyan , I was breaking.
„ nīn es'ālakkai :	nīn es'ālakkī , thou wast breaking
„ ās es'ālag'yas :	ād es'ālagyā , he, she, it was breaking.
Pl. ēm es'ālakkam :	ēm es'ālagyam , we were breaking.
„ nām es'ālakkat :	nām es'ālakkat , we and you were breaking.
„ nīm es'ālakkar :	nīm es'ālakkai , you were breaking.
„ ār es'ālagyar :	ār es'ālagyai , they were breaking.

NEUTER II AND III PERSON PLURAL.

ibrā or abrā es'alagyā, you, they were breaking.

Remark: In the first and second persons ra'alagyan and ra'alagyai ra'alagyam, ra'alagyat and raalagyar may also be used.

PERFECT TENSE.

§ 72. This tense is formed with the aid of the Kurukh auxiliary bē'enā, to be, which however is incomplete, having only the indefinite present tense, viz:—

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ēn bē'edan :	ēn bē'en , I am.
„	nīn bē'edai :	nīn bī'idi , thou art.
„	ās bē'edas :	ād bī'i , he, she, it is.
Pl.	ēm bē'edam :	ēm bē'em , we are.
„	nām bē'edat :	nām bē'edat , we and you are.
„	nīm bē'edar :	nīm bē'edai , you are.
„	ār bē'enar :	ār bē'enai , they are.

NEUTER III PLURAL.

ibrā or abrā bī'i, they are.

In forming the perfect tense of a verb the above auxiliary is added to the full inflected form of the past tense of that verb for all persons, genders and numbers.

	Masculine.	Feminine
Sing.	ēn eskān bē'edan :	ēn iskin bē'en , I have broken, or iskī bē'en .
„	nīn eskai bē'edai :	nīn iskī bē'idi , or bī'idī thou hast broken.
„	ās eskās bē'edas :	ād iskī bī'i , he, she, it has broken.
Pl.	ēm eskām bē'edam :	ēm iskim, bē'em , we have broken, or iski bē'em
„	nām eskat bē'edat :	nām eskat bē'edat , we and you have broken.
„	nīm eskar bē'edar :	nīm eskai bē'edai , you have broken.
„	ār eskar bē'enar :	ār eskai bē'enai , they have broken.

NEUTER III PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā iski bi'i, they have broken.

The auxiliary verb ra'and.

§ 73. Instead of bē'andar the auxiliary verb ra'and is frequently employed; ēn eskan ra'adan, nin eskai ra'adai etc. It is supposed that this auxiliary, with the aid of which the pluperfect tense is formed, is the Hindi verb rahnā, to remain; however, if this be so, the Kurukhising of it has been completed in an almost perfect manner, for it is conjugated in all tenses except in the pluperfect. In Kurukh it is written ra'and and belongs to the second class of verbs, which have as their tense characteristic of the historical past ck for masculine and c'a for feminine and neuter verbs. Before proceeding with the pluperfect it will be therefore necessary to give the conjugation of his verb ra'ana. It is notable that in Kurukh there are no genuine independent auxiliary verbs.

§ 74. Present indefinite tense.

	Masculine	Feminine
Sing.	ēn ra'adan :	ēn ra'an , I remain.
„	nin ra'adai :	nin ra'adi , thou remainest.
„	ās ra'adas or ra'as :	ād ra'i , he, she, it remains.
Pl.	ēm ra'adam :	ēm ra'em , we remain.
„	nām ra'adat :	nām ra'adat , we and you remain.
„	nīm ra'adar :	nīm ra'adai , you remain.
„	ār ra'anar :	ār ra'anai , they remain.

NEUTER AND PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā ra'i, they remain.

Present definite.

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ēn ra'alagdan :	ēn ra'alag'ēn , I am remaining.
„	nin ra'alagdai :	nin ra'alagdī , thou art remaining.

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ās ra'alagdas ;	ād ra'alag'ī ,	he, she, it is remaining.
Plur.	ēm ra'alagdam ;	ēm ra'alag'ēm ,	we are remaining.
„	nām ra'alagdat ;	nām ra'alagdat ,	we and you are remaining.
„	nīm ra'alagdar ;	nīm ra'alagdai ,	you are remaining.
„	ār ra'alagnar ;	ār ra'alagnai ,	they are remaining.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā ra'alag'ī, they are remaining.

§ 75. Imperfect.

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ra'alakkan ;	ra'alag'an ,	I was remaining.
„	ra'alakkai ;	ra'alakk'ī ,	thou wast remaining.
„	ra'alakkas or ra'alagyas ;	ra'alagyā ,	he, she, it was remaining.
Plur.	ra'alakkam or ra'alagyam ;	ra'alag'ēm ,	we were remaining.
„	ra'alagyar ;	ra'alagnai ,	they were remaining.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā ra'alagyā, they were remaining.

Past tense.

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ra'ekan ;	ra'e'an ,	I remained.
„	ra'ekai ;	ra'ekī ,	thou remainedst.
„	ra'ecas ;	ra'cā ,	he, she, it remained.
„	ra'ekam ;	ra'e'ēm ,	we remained.
„	ra'ekat ;	ra'ekat ,	we and you remained.
„	ra'ekar ;	ra'ekai ,	you remained.
„	ra'ear ;	ra'c'ai ,	they remained.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā ra'ca, they remained.

Perfect.

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ra'ckan bē'edan ;	ra'an bē'ēn ,	I have remained.
„	ra'ckai bē'edai ;	ra'ckī bi'idī ,	thou hast remained.
„	ra'ckas bē'edus ;	ra'c'ā bi'i ,	he, she has remained.
Plur.	ra'ckam bē'edam ;	ra'c'ēm bē'ēm ,	we have remained.

„	ra'ckar bē'edat ;	ra'ckai bē'edai ,	you have remained.
„	ra'ckar bē'enar ;	ra'c'ai bē'enai ,	they have remained.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā ra'c'ā bi'i, they have remained.

Future.

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ēn ra'on ;	ēn ra'on ,	I will, shall remain.
„	nīn ra'oe ;	nīn ra'oe ,	thou wilt, shalt remain.
„	ās ra'ōs ;	ād ra'ō ,	he, she, it will, shall remain.
Plur.	ēm ra'om ;	ēm ra'om ,	we will, shall remain.
„	nām ra'ōt ;	nām ra'ōt ,	we and you will, shall remain.
„	nīm ra'or ;	nīm ra'or ,	you will, shall remain.
„	ār ra'ōr ;	ār ra'ōr ,	they will, shall remain.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā ra'ō, they will remain.Pluperfect of the verb Esna.

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ēn eskan ra'ckan ;	ēn iskin ra'o'an ,	I had broken.
„	nīn eskai ra'ckai ;	nīn iski ra'ckī ,	thou hadst broken.

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	ās eskās ra'c'as ;	ād iskī ra'c'ā ,	he, she, it had broken.
Plur.	ēm eskām ra'ckam ;	ēm eskam ra'c'am ,	we had broken.
„	nām eskat ra'ckat ;	nām eskat ra'ckat ,	we and you had broken.
„	nām eskar ra'ckar ;	nām eskai ra'ckai ,	you had broken.
„	ār eskar ra'c'ar ;	ār eskai ra'cnoi ,	they had broken.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā iskī ra'c'ā, they had broken.

Past Future.

The Kurukh has no special form for the past future, but with the help of the verb khacnā, to complete, the meaning of a futurum exactum is brought out, if we add the future tense of this verb to the modified stem of the preceding verb, viz.—

	Masculine.	Feminine.
Sing.	en es'ā khac'on :	the same, I shall or will have broken.
„	nīn es'ā khac'oe :	ditto, thou shalt or wilt have broken.
„	as es'ā khac'ō's :	ād es'ā khac'ō , he, she, it shall or will have broken.
Plur.	em es'ā khac'om :	the same, we shall or will have broken.
„	nam es'ā khac'ōt :	ditto we and you shall or will have broken.
„	nīm es'ā khac'ōr :	ditto you shall or will have broken.
„	ar es'ā khac'or :	ditto they shall or will have broken.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā es'ā khac'ō, they have broken.

§ 78. Besides khacnā, the Hindī verb cuknā, to finish, is also employed in the formation of the past future, cuknā being Kurukhized into cukrnā, the future tense of which is added to the root of the preceding verb, viz.—

	Masculine.	Feminine and Neuter.
Sing.	En es' cukr'on :	ēn' es' cukr'on , I shall or will have broken.
„	Nīn es' cukr'oe :	nīn es' cukr'oe , thou shalt or wilt have broken.

Masculine.

Feminine and Neuter.

- Sing. As es' cukr'ōs : ād es' cukr'ō, he, she, it shall or will have broken.
 „ Ēm es' cukr'om : ēm es' cukr'om, we shall or will have broken.
 „ Nām es' cukr'ōt : nām es' cukr'ōt we and you shall or will have broken.
 „ Nīm es' cukr'or : nīm es' cukr'or, you shall or will have broken.
 „ Ar es' cukr'ōr : ār es' cukr'ōr, they]shall or will have broken.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā, es' cukr'ō.

C.—The Subjunctive.

§79. This mood is also employed for the potential and optative ; but it is very defective, having only one tense the present indefinite, which is formed by the suffix nekk'ā, which is added to the inflected form of the present indefinite indicative mood, viz :—

Masculine.

Feminine.

Sing. ēn esdan nekk'ā :	es'ēn nekk'ā , I may break.
„ nīn esdai nekk'ā :	esdī nekk'ā , thou mayst break.
„ ās esdas nekk'ā :	ād es'ā nekkā , he, she, it may break.
Plur. ēm esdan nekk'ā :	es'ēm nekk'ā , we may break.
„ nām esdat nekk'ā :	esdat nekk'ā , we and you may break.
„ nīm esdar nekk'ā :	esdai nekk'ā , you may break.
„ ār esnar nekk'ā :	esnai nekk'ā , they may break.

NEUTER III, PERSON—PLURAL.

Ibrā or abrā es'ā nekk'ā, they may break.

§80. Besides the above form, the subjunctive may be expressed also by the future indicative, viz., ēn es'on, I may break, etc. There is, however, a slight difference in the meaning of the two, which may be illustrated by the following example : nām esdat nekk'ā, we may break or let us break, and nām es'ōt, which has the same meaning, but with this difference that whilst the former implies that the action is to be done immediately after a given moment or the completion of a given action, the latter denotes that it is to be done in the immediate future.

The subjunctive is formed also by the application of the conjunctions ēkātī and ēkānū, that or in order that, e. g., ōsangī ciā, ēkātī (ēkānū) ēn īdīn esdannekk'ā (or es'en), hand me the ploughshare that I may break this.

D.—The Conditional Mood.

§ 81. The conditional is formed by inserting the conjunction holē, then, between the conditional clause and the completive part of the sentence, and by adding finally the conjunction pahē, however, in hypothetical sentences, e. g., if you break this, I will beat you, īdīn es'or holē, nīman lau'on. If you broke this, I would beat you: īdīn eskar, holē nīman lau'on pahē. It must be noted that the past conditional always puts the verb of the completing clause in the future indicative. In the same manner the pluperfect of the conditional is formed: If thou hadst broken this, I would have beaten you, īdīn eskar ra'ackar, holē nīman lau'on pahē. Other examples, future: if he break this, it will be well, īdīn es'ōs, holē dāu manō; past: if he broke this, it would be well, īdīn es'as holē dāu manō pahē; pluperfect: if he had broken this, it would have been well, īdīn eskas ra'c'as, holē dāu manō pahē.

REMARK.—Pahē is elliptical, leaving something to be added, viz., that the condition had not been fulfilled, and therefore the consequence did not happen or need not be carried out: īdīn eskai ra'ackai, holē nīman lauon pahē thou didst not break it, therefore I need not beat thee.

E.—The Imperative Mood.

§ 82. This mood is formed by adding either the vowel ā or the syllable kē to the root of the verb both for the singular and plural number. In the feminine and neuter singular as well as in the neuter plural this ā is changed into ai, and when women speak to women the d is changed into ḍ.

Example:—

	Singular.	Plural.
Maso.	Nin es'ā , thou break.	Nim es'ā , you break.
Fem.	Nin es'ai , ditto.	Nim es'ā , ditto.
Neut.	Nin es'ai , ditto.	Nim es'ai , ditto.

Feminine (for use among women): nim es'e, you break.

The form kē is employed when a more familiar or milder sort of imperative is intended or when the fulfilment of the action commanded is not expected to be accomplished at once. Illustration: Bar'ā, come! (i.e., at once); bar'kē, come (if you please). Kē remains unaltered in all genders and both numbers. In a similar way kō and ko'e are employed as a kind of mild imperative, e.g., bar'kō bar'ko'e, come; kālkō, kal'ko'e, go! Compare the Mundari polite imperative ko; senkome, please go. Kō and ko'e are likewise added to the mild imperative: barkē kō, barkē ko'e; the former is used when men or boys are addressed, the latter when girls are addressed. Compare § 139.

§ 83. In the irregular verb ka'anā, to go, not only the past tense but also the imperative mood is formed in a special manner; it has kalā, go, for masculine singular and plural; kalai for the feminine and neuter singular and neuter plural, and kāl'e for the plural among women.

The imperative may be intensified by such words as khacnā, to complete, and capnā, to fulfil, es'ā khac'ā would mean "be sure to break", and es'ā cap'ā, "break quickly". The forms for the other genders are: es'ai khac'ai, es'ai cap'ai, es'e khac'e, es'e cap'e. Of course, the future also may be employed imperatively: En āndan idin nin es'oe, I tell you, you will (have to) break this. Likewise the subjunctive is used as an imperative: ār idin es'arnekkā, may they break this. There is no honorific imperative in Kurukh besides kē which resembles it somewhat.

F.—The Infinitive Mood.

§ 84. The infinitive ending of the Kurukh verb is sometimes considered to be nā; but this ending is probably borrowed from the Hindi grammar. The genuine form of this mood seems to be an a added to the root of the verb; for if we wish to say: to break, for the purpose of breaking, we cannot say esnā gē, but must say esā gē or simply esā; e.g., ēn esā gē ka'adan or better ēn esā ka'adan, I go to break. The infinitive form of the verb has of course the character of a verbal noun, and is therefore declinable and is used as a matter of course also adjectively.

§ 76. Esnā, to break or the breaking.

	Singular.		Plural.
N.	esnā , the breaking.		esnāguṭhi , the breakings.
G.	esnā gahi , of the breaking.		esnāguṭhi gahi , of the breakings.
D.	esnā gē , to the breaking.		esnāguṭhi gē , to the breakings.
Ac.	esnan , the breaking.		esnāguṭhin , the breakings.
Abl.	esnā tī , from the breaking.		esnāguṭhin tī , from the breakings.
Intr.	esnā trū , by the breaking.		esnāguṭhi trū , by the breakings.
Loc.	esnā nū , in the breaking.		esnāguṭhi nū , in the breakings.

EXAMPLES.

- Nom. Esnā olthā nalakh ra'ī, breaking is a difficult work.
 Gen. Esnā gahi ōr ondr'ā, bring the tools for breaking.
 Dat. Esnā gē ēp kbarrnā manjā, to the breaking stealing of the rope was added.
 Acc. Esnān nebbā nalakh ambā org'ā, do not think that breaking is light work.
 Abl. Esnā tī endr manō ? from the breaking what will happen?
 Loc. Esnā nū sawang cār ra'ī, in breaking force is required.

G.—Participles.

§ 85. The Kurukh participles are—

A. Adverbial participles—One is formed by the addition of the sign of the locative case nū, the emphasized form of which is num; nū is also combined with the ablative case-sign tī emphasized: tim, nūtim. These tense characteristics are added to the root of the verb; e.g., esnum and esnū tī or esnū tim, breaking. They are the same in all numbers, persons and genders; esnum is also repeated: ās esnum esnum barālagyas, he came breaking. When intensity is to be denoted, the adverb darā, also, even, is affixed to the tense characteristic pum, ās esnum darā barālagyas, he came breaking.

Another adverbial participle is formed by adding the adverb khanē, emphatic khanem, then, upon, to the modified stem of the verb, viz., es'ā khanē or es'ā khanem, on breaking, upon breaking, or in the very act of breaking. It is used for all tenses, genders, persons and numbers.

A third adverbial participle is formed by affixing the participle tense characteristic r to the modified root of the preceding verb and adding the governing verb thereto; ēn es'ar ka'adan, having broken I go; ēn es'ar ka'on having broken I will go; ēn es'ar barckan having broken I came.

A fourth adverbial participle is found in r'ā and t'ā; the former being used especially with alliterative verbs; e.g., gurgurr'ā, rolling, kaṭarkuṭurr'ā, gnashing. T'ā conveys the meaning till, up to, in connection with the verb, which is used adverbially, e.g., ār bijt'ā (or bijta'a or bijimt'ā, bijimta'ā) bēcālagyar, they danced till daylight, lit. daybreak-danced making the day to break.

§ 86. B. An adjectival participle is formed by the infinitive: ās esnā dū ra'adas, he is a man who breaks; ād pārnā pellō, she is a singing girl; also by the particle ū added to the root of the verb, esū, pārū; ās esū ālas ra'adas, he is a man who breaks; ād pārū pellō, she is a singing girl.

C. The past participle is also used adjectively.

Its form is kā, which is added to the root of the verb; eskā, broken, for all genders and numbers; ānnā, to say, past participle ānkā, spoken; ānkā kathā, the spoken word.

Adjectival participles can be conjugated as ordinary verbs: eskā broken.

Sing. 1.	eskan , f. iskin .	Plu. 1.	eskam , f. iskim .
„ 2.	eskai , f. & n. iski .	„ 2.	eskar , f. eskai , n. iski .
„ 3.	eskas , f. & n. iski .	„ 3.	eskar , f. eskai , n. iski ;

REMARK.—The past participle is used substantively: ānkā, the word; keckā, the dead one, fem. keckas, the dead one, masc; keckar, the dead ones.

§ 87. Conjunctive participles.—These are formed in different ways:—

(a) By adding the governing verb to the inflected form of the preceding verb and by making the latter agree with the former in number, gender, person and tense; e.g., ās es'as barcas, having broken he came; ēn esdan ka'adan, breaking I go; ēn es'on kā'on, breaking I will go.

(b) By inserting the tense characteristic kī between the preceding inflected verb and the governing verb, making them agree both as to number, gender, person and tense. Example: ēn esdan kī ka'adan, having broken I go; ēn es'on kī kā'on, breaking I will go; ēn eskan kī barcan, having broken I came.

(c) By inserting kī between the modified root of the governed verb, to which the first characteristic r has already been added and the principal verb; ēn es'ar kī ka'adin, having broken I go; ēn es'ar kī kā'on, having broken I will go; ēn es'ar kī barcan, having broken I came.

§ 88. When it is intended to emphasize the action of the conjunctive participle, the word darā is added to the same; ās es'as darā kēras; ās es'ā darā kēras, breaking or having broken he went; ās es'os darā kā'os, ās es'ār darā kā'os, having broken he will go; but darā cannot be combined with kī because the latter denotes already intensity or completion of action.

§ 89. When the governing noun stands in the imperative, any of the preceding forms of the conjunctive participle may be employed: es'ā kalā; es'ā darā kalā; es'ar kalā, es'ar darā kalā, es'ā kī kalā, es'ar kī kalā, breaking or having broken go. The feminine forms are: es'ai kalai and es'ē kālē; es'ai darā kalui and es'ē darā kālē; es'ar kalai and es'ar kālē; es'ar darā kalai and es'ar darā kāl'ē; es'ai kī kalai and es'ē kī kālē; es'ar kī kalai and es'ar kī kāl'ē, having broken go.

H.—Noun of Agency.

§ 90. The noun of agency is formed by adding the vowel ū to the root of the verb, whether it ends in a consonant or in a vowel; if the verb begins with the vowel e, the latter is changed into i, esnā, to break, es, the root, iśū, indef., a person who breaks; iś'us, def., the one who breaks; isur, the persons who break; onnā, to eat, ūnū, an eater; ūnus, the eater, ūnur, the eaters.

The declension of the noun of agency is regular.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Is'us ,	the breaker or the breaking one.	Is'ur ,	the breaking ones.
G. Is'us gahi ,	of the breaker or the breaking one.	Is'ur gahi ,	of the breaking ones.
D. Is'us gē ,	to the breaker or the breaking one.	Is'urgē ,	to the breaking ones.
Ac. Is'us in ,	the breaker or the breaking one.	Is'urin ,	the breaking ones.
Abl. Is'us tī }	from, by the breaker or the breaking one.	Is'ur tī ,	from or by the breaking ones.
Inst. Is'us trū }		Is'ur trū
Loc. Is'us nū ,	in the breaker or the breaking one.	Is'ur nū ,	in the breaking ones.
Fem. Sing.	Is'ū j	Plur.	is'ur .
Neut. „	Is'ū j	„	is'ū .

I.—The different classes of the verb.

§ 91. It has been explained already how the Kurukh verbs, though they have but one conjugation, may be divided into four different classes, according to the various manners in which the tense characteristic of their past tense is formed.

One class, taking ka and ā respectively as tense characteristic, has been exemplified by the conjugation of the verb esnā; eskan, masculine, es'en, feminine, I broke, and es'as and es'ā, he and she broke.

Another class takes ka and ya as tense characteristic: example, ānnā, to say—

	Masculine.	Feminine.	Neuter.
Sing.	Ēn ānkan ;	ānyan ;		I said or did say.
„	Nin ānkai ;	ānkī ;		thou saidst or didst say.
„	Ās ānyas ;	ād ānyā ;	ād ānyā ,	he, she, it said or did say.
Plur.	Ēm ānkam ;	ānyam ;		we said or did say.

Plur.	Nām ānkat ;	ānkat ;		we and you said or did say.
„	Nīm ānkar ;	ānkai ;	ānki,	you said or did say.
„	Ār ānyar ;	ānyai ;	ānyā,	they said or did say.

The third class takes as its tense characteristic ckā and c'a respectively : example, barnā, to come—

	Masculine.	Feminine.	Neuter.
Sing.	Ēn barckan ;	barc'an ;		I came.
„	Nīm barckai ;	barckī ;		thou camest.
„	Ās barckas ;	barcā ;	barcā,	he, she, it came.
Plur.	Ēm barckam ;	barc'am ;		we came.
„	Nān barckat ;	barckat ;		we and you came.
„	Nīm barckar ;	barckai ;	barckī,	you came.
„	Ār barckar ;	barckai ;	barcā,	they came.

The fourth class takes jka j'a as its tense characteristic for the past tense : example, nannā, to do

	Masculine.	Feminine.	Neuter.
Sing.	Ēn nanjkan ;	nanj'an ;		I did.
„	Nīm nanjkai ;	nanjkī ;		thou didst.
„	Ās nanjas ;	nanjā ;	nanjā,	he, she, it did.
Plur.	Ēm nanjkam ;	nanj'am ;		we did.
„	Nām nanjkat ;	nanjkat ;		we and you did.
„	Nīm nanjkar ;	nanjkai ;	nanjkī,	you did.
„	Ār nanjar ;	nanjai ;	nanjā,	they did.

§ 92. It is impossible to lay down general rules as to the classification of Kurukh verbs, according to the termination of their roots. However, there are some rules, which serve as useful guides. For instance, if the root of the verb ends in a double vowel, or if the verb is borrowed from Hindi, we may safely say that it will form its past tense in a particular manner.

RULE I.—If the root of the verb ends in a double vowel, as aa, ee, ii or oo, it invariably takes ekā and c'a respectively as its tense characteristic for the past; e.g., ba'anā, to speak, bāckan, bācas, bāc'an, bācā; hē'anā, to bind, hēckan, hēcas, hēc'an, hēcā; cī'inā, to give, cickan, cicas, cic'an, civā; hō'onā, to take away, ockan, ocas, oc'an, ocā.

RULE II.—All Hinduized verbs or verbs derived from Hindi, especially transitives, also take c'ka and c'ā in the past tense; as likh'kan, I wrote, likh'cas, he wrote; dage'kan, I marked; chut'kan, I got free.

REMARK.—There are many more verbs which take c'kā, c'ā in the past, both transitives and intransitives, which cannot be brought under any definite rule.

RULE III.—All passive verbs and all intransitive and reciprocal verbs, the roots of which end in r take ka and a in the past tense; e. g., khatrnā, khatrkan, I fell; piṛnā, piṛkas, he was killed; kacnakrnā, kacnakrkar; you spoke among yourselves.

RULE IV.—Transitive verbs generally take kan and yan as tense characteristics of the past tense: kajnā, kajkan, I pressed down; kajyā, she pressed down; liṇḍnā, liṇḍkan, I kneaded; liṇḍyā, she kneaded; natagnā, natagkan, I drew, natagya, she drew.

K.—The Passive Voice.

§ 93. The formation of the Passive voice in the Kurukh language is very simple, no auxiliary being needed for this purpose, nothing beyond the insertion of the voice characteristic consonant r between the root and the inflectional termination of the active voice, these inflections being the same as in the indicative mood.

Active voice: esnā, to break; passive voice, esrnā, to be broken.

Conjugation: Present Indefinite.

Masculine.		Feminine.
Sing. En esrdan ,	I am broken.	En esr'en ,	I am broken.
„ Nin esrdai ,	thou art broken.	Nin esrdī ,	thou art broken.
„ Ās esrdas ,	he is broken.	Ād esr'ī ,	she, it is broken.

Masculine.Feminine.

Plur. Ēm esrdam , we are broken.	Ēm esr'ēm , we are broken.
Nām esrdat , we and you are broken.	Nām esrdat , we and you are broken
Nīm esrdar , you are broken.	Nīm esrdai , you are broken.
Ār esrnar , they are broken.	Ār esrnai , they are broken.
The neuter plural, second and third persons: esrdī and esr'ī .

§ 94.

Present Definite.

MASCULINE.

Ēn esr'āldan, ēm esr'āldam, etc., I am and we are being broken ;
or

Ēn esr'ālagdan, ēm esr'ālagdam, etc., I am and we are being broken.

FEMININE.

Ēn esr'al'ēm, ēm esr'al'ēm, etc., I am and we are being broken ;
or

Ēn esr'ālag'ēn, ēm esr'ālag'ēm, etc., I am and we are being broken.

FUTURE.

Ēn esr'on, and fem., I will, shall be broken.

PAST FUTURE.

En esr'khaç'on or esr'oukr'on, masc. and fem., I will, shall have been broken.

§ 95.

ADVERBIAL AND ADJECTIVE PARTICIPLES.

Pres., esr'num, esr'num esr'num, esr'num darā, esr'nūti, esr'nātim; being broken, isrū, being broken, being breakable.

Past., esr'kā, having been broken.

CONJUNCTIVE PARTICIPLES.

Esrās, esrās darā, etc., (he) being broken.

Esraskī, (he) ditto.

Esrar darā, (he) ditto.

Esrarkī, (he) ditto.

ADVERBIAL PARTICIPLE.

Esr'a kḥanem, on being broken, in the act of being broken.

INFINITIVE.

Esrnā, to be broken; gerund, esrnā gahi, etc.

IMPERATIVE.

Esr'ā, masc.; esr'ai, fem. sing., esr'ē, fem. pl., be broken.

NOUN OF AGENCY.

Isr'ū, indef., isr'ur, isr'us, def. one, ones, the one, who is (are) broken.

CONJUNCTIVE OR OPTATIVE.

Masc. As esrdasnekk'ā; ād esr'ā nekk'ā, he, she, it may be broken.

Masc and fem. Ar esrnarnekk'ā, they may be broken.

Ditto, Nām esr'datnekk'ā, we and you may be broken.

L.—On the formation of Intransitive and Transitive Verbs.

§ 96. The letter r, the voice characteristic of the passive, is used in changing a transitive verb into an intransitive, for instance :

Assnā ,	to play an instrument ;	asrnā ,	to tremble, to vibrate.
Khondnā ,	to collect ;	khondrnā ,	to assemble.
Tēbnā ,	to extinguish, put out ;	tēbrnā ,	to be extinguished, go out.
Ejnā ,	to awake, to waken ;	ejrnā ,	to be awake.
Khoṭtnā ,	to break, smash ;	khoṭtrnā ,	to break, get smashed.
Kolnā ,	to open ;	kolrnā ,	to be opened, get opened.

The passive verb frequently serves as an intransitive—

Esrnā ,	to be broken ;		to break in two.
Ebsrnā ,	to be lost ;		to get lost.

§ 97. Intransitives are changed into transitives by affixing a double aa to the root of the intransitive verb ; e.g., mar^kkhnā, to be dirty ; mar^kkhā'ana, to soil, to make dirty ; ēḍsrnā, to come in touch : ēḍsrā'anā, to touch, to reach at. Also by employing the causal form : Kitnā, to rot ; kittā'anā (to cause to rot), to destroy ; bitnā, to cook, boil, intr. bittā'anā, to cause to boil, to cook ; trans. kharkhnā to sound, kharkhtāanā, to tune ; khandrnā, to sleep ; khandrtāā, to put to sleep ; kundrnā, to be born, kundrtā'anā, to beget, generate ; mennā, to hear, mentā'anā, to tell ; see also § 89.

M.—Causal Verbs.

§ 98. Causal verbs are formed by the insertion of the syllable tā'a between the root and the inflectional endings of the active verb : esnā, estā'anā, to cause to break ; besides this insertion no change whatever takes place in the conjugation of causal verbs, tā'a becomes tō'o in the future and is often contracted into tā in the past tense—

En estā'adan, I cause to break ; ēn estōon, I will, shall cause to break ; also estā'on.

Pres. ind. Nin estā'adai, thou causest to break ; nin estō'oe, thou wilt, shalt cause to break.

Pres. def. Ēn etā'alagdan, I am causing to break.

Past. ēn estā'ackan or estāckan, I cause to break.

Imperf. ēn estā'alakkan, I was causing to break.

Perf. ēn estā'ackan bē'edan or estāckan bē'edan, I have caused to break.

Pluf. ēn estā'ackan ra'ackan or estāckan ra'ackan, I had caused to break.

Passive. estārṇā, to be caused to be broken, i.e., to be broken.

Pres. indef. estārḍan, I am caused to be broken or I am broken.

Pres. def. estār'alagdan, ditto.

Past. estārckan, I was caused to be broken or to break.

Imperf. estār'alakkan, I was being caused to be broken or to break.

Perf. estārckan bē'edan, I have been caused to be broken or to break.

Pluf. estār'ckan ra'ackan, I had been caused to be broken or to break.

Fut. estārō'on, I will, shall be caused to be broken or break.

§ 99. Causals are also formed by the insertion of the consonant d between the root of the verb and the inflectional ending; e.g.—

Onnā, to eat, ondnā, to feed, i.e., to cause to eat.

Mennā, to hear; mendnā, to tell, lit. to cause to hear.

Verbs which add bā'a to the modified root are likewise of a causal nature, viz.—

Guchrnā, to go out of the way; guchābā'anā to cause to go out of the way, to put aside.

Bohārnā, to float (intr.); bohābā'anā, to cause to float (trans.).

Sikhrnā (Hindī), to learn; sikhābā'anā, to cause to learn, i.e., to teach.

The verbs constructed with ba'anā are as a rule borrowed words and may be considered as being transitive.—

Hartābā'anā, to serve, dole out; hīhābā'anā, to sever, divide; jumābā'anā, to collect, to unite; jhukābā'anā, to bend; kankonamba'anā, to vex, irritate; lerbharamba'anā, to throw dust or mud on somebody; ūntivamba'anā, to wag the tail; mōlābā'anā, to raffle or sell by auction; bharubā'anā, to entice; bīlībāmbā'anā, to shine dimly; andhmundhamba'anā, to perplex, confound.

N.—Irregular Verbs.

§ 100. The number of irregular verbs in Karukh is very small, and their irregularity does not consist in any deviation from the regular inflection but rather in various modifications of the roots and the permutation of ounds.

The principal are :—

Ka'anā, to go ; kirkan or kerkan, I went ; kald, go.

Hō'onā, to take away ; oekan, I took away ; hō'ā, take away.

Una, to plough ; usskan, I ploughed ; uyā, plough ; uiyon, I will lough.

Khō'enā, to measure ; khōjkan, I measured ; khōyā, measure.

Khoenā or khoynā, to out grain, to harvest ; khosskan, reaped ; khoyon, shall reap.

Khottnā, to smash ; khuttkan, I smashed ; khotton, I will smash.

Nollnā, nullkan, to take water into one's hand.

Khossnā, to out, dig ; khuttkan, I dug ; khossā, dig.

Pōenā, to rain ; possā, it rained ; pōeyō, it will rain.

Nāynā, to pain ; nuncā, it pained ; nā'yō, it will pain.

Onnā, to drink, eat ; ondkan, drank, ate ; ōnā, drink, eat.

O.—Defective Verbs.

§101. Of these, bē'enā, to be, has been described already ; another is taldan, I am, with the corresponding negative verb maldan, I am not. Of taldan we have no other form ; what is left is only a double form for the present tense ; the first may be called the indefinite, the other the definite present.

§102.

Conjugation of taldan.

	Masculine. .	Femline.	Neuter.
Singular	Ēn taldan ;	tal'ēn ,		I am.
„	Nīn taldai ;	taldī ;	taldī ,	thou art.

„	Nim talyar ;	talyai ;	talyī,	you are.
„	Ār talyar ;	talyar ;	talyā,	they are.

Examples showing the difference in meaning of these two present forms :

As gollas taldas means he is a landlord ; ās paddantā gollas talyas, he is the landlord of the village.

The counterpart or negative form of taldan is maldan, which has three different forms for the present tense, but no form for any other tense.

§ 103. Conjugation of maldan, I am not.

	Masculine.	Feminine.	Neuter.
Singular	Ēn maldan ;	mal'ēn,		I am not.

„	Nām malkat	malkat		we and you are not.
„	Nim malkar	malkai	malkai	you are not.
„	Ār malkar	malkar	malkai	they are not.

Remarks on maldan.

Maldan is indefinite : Ēn bēlan malkan, I am not a king.

Malyan is definite : Ās bēlkhantā bēlas malyas, he is not the king of the state. Malkan is also definite. The difference between malyan and malkan is this : the former is used in a qualitative sense : ēn malyan, I am not, i.e., the one you suppose ; whilst malkan is used in a locative sense, ēn malkan, I am not here or there ; ās erpā nū ra'as ? Is he at home ? Ās malkas, he is not (at home) ; Ās ujjnām ra'as ? Is he still alive ? Ās malkas, he is not i.e., existing here or there, he is dead.

Maldan, malyan or malkan is a defective negative verb. Besides it there are two more negative verbs in Kurukh which, however, are complete in all tenses ; viz, the counterparts of akhnā, to know and oṅnā, to be able ; namely, balnā, to know not ; polnā, to be unable. They are conjugated regularly and take ka, an, a in the past as the characteristic of that tense ēn baldan, I do not know ; nin baldai, thou doest not know ; ās poldās, he cannot, is unable ; ār polōr, they will be unable ; ēn polkān, I could not ; ād bal'ālugyā, she did not know.

P.—The reciprocal auxiliary nakrnā to be or act towards one another.

§ 105. In forming reciprocal verbs we have to add nakrnā either to the root of the verb or to its modified stem, as the case may be. The latter takes place whenever the verb belongs to those classes which form their past tense by taking ck or jk as tense characteristic. The conjugation is quite regular, but it must be kept in mind that nakrnā applies only to the plural number.

Examples :—

Ērnakrnā, to look upon one another; kēbnakrnā, to abuse one another; laucnakrnā, to beat one another; menjnakrnā, to ask one another. Nīm endr ērnakrdar, Why do you look at each other? Nīm ambā kēbnakr'ā, Don't abuse each other! Ārin ērkē ār laucnakro'ōr, see to them, they will beat each other. Ar laucnakrālayar, they were beating each other.

In a few instances the addition of nakrnā to the root of the verb conveys the idea that the action represented by the latter is being done in company or with others; thus bojgnakrnā, to run away one with another. Nakrnā further denotes habit or ability to do something: ēn Kurukh kacnakrdan I am able to speak Urāo or I am in the habit of speaking Urāo. Kacnakrnā really means to talk with or to one another, i.e., converse.

§ 106. Along with nakrnā the postposition ganē, with, is employed, when it is necessary to denote reciprocal action being done between two distinct parties, e.g., mētar mukkar ganē laucnakrnar, the men with the women are beating one another, i.e., the men on the one side and the women on the other are beating each other. Mētar mukkar laucnakrnar means: men and women are beating one another (without having formed two different parties).

The reflexive pronoun tām in the locative case from tām nū is also employed along with nakrnā for the same purpose as ganē: mētar mukkar tām tām nū laucnakrnar, the men and the women are beating one another, amongst themselves, i.e., being two separate parties. Mētar mukkar tām nū launar would mean, that the men and the women are quarrelling between themselves.

§ 107. The passive voice characteristic r is made use of to form reflexive verbs, e.g., mūjhnā, to wash another's face; mūjhrnā, to wash one's own face; laykharṇā, to stumble over one's own feet; injrṇā, to blow one's own nose; nimrārṇā, to mend one's own ways; nōrṇā, to wash; nōrhrṇā, to wash one's self.

R.—Compound Verbs.

§ 108. There are many compound verbs in Kurukh, viz.—

One class is formed by the combination of a verb with an uninflected noun ; the former being conjugated regularly. They may be called nominals, though in reality they are rather idiomatic phrases.

Examples :—

Khan ēkhnā, to sleep, lit. to shade or cool the eyes.

Pab ērnā, to expect, lit. to see the way.

Khēkhēl ērnā, to spy, lit. to look towards the earth.

Aḍē ērnā, to envy, lit. to be squint-eyed.

Khol kha'ana, to take on the back, to lift, to stoop.

Moñjā manā, to salute, lit. to remain in waiting.

Cokh manā, to pass by, to go or to remain aside.

Nāyī kōrnā, to have fever, lit. to have a flame or fire which has entered into one.

Nāyī ambnā, the leaving of the fever.

Sendrā bēcnā, to hunt.

Makul idrnā, to bow the knee, lit. to have the knee planted.

Siba khārnā, to covet, to envy.

Kīra sārṇā and umhē sārṇā, to be hungry and to be patient or content.

Amm paonā, to become acclimatized, lit. to digest the water.

Jharā ladnā, to make rice beer, lit. to lay up rice beer.

Ēkh oknā, to take shelter, lit. to sit in the shade.

Addā ērnā, to look out for an opportunity.

Daṇḍī pārnā, to sing, to sing a song.

Dudhī ambnā, to be weaned, lit. to leave the breast.

Dhukū kōrnā, to become a concubine.

Cambī ēknā, to walk in another's footsteps.

Am n ka'ana, to fetch water, lit. go for water.

Nāme pinjnā, to name, lit. fix a name.

Ōmā cōdnā, to be ambitious, lit. to raise honour.

Pādā hē'ēnā, to take root, lit. to bind the root.

Pāgār launā, to throw up a mud wall, lit. to beat a wall of mud.

Pāhī ērnā or khōjnā, to attend on guests, to be hospitable.

Tīnā khārnā, to neglect, lit. to despise the right hand.

Umhā sārṇā, to be happy, to feel comfortable.

Lether okknā, to squat on the ground.

Luhārī onnā, to breakfast.

Khadd pāknā, to be confined, delivered of child.

§ 109. Other nominals are formed with the help of the verb nannā, to do; ra'anā, to be, and mannā, to become—similar to the Hindi auxiliaries, karnā, hōnā and hōjānā:

Uber nannā, to clear up, to shine (weather, sun).

Jokhā nannā, to compare.

Hurū nannā, to stop, to make an end.

Gundā nannā, to pound.

Eppā nannā, to get married, lit. to make a house.

Dārē nannā, to make a sacrifice.

Dumbī nannā, to slander.

Billī nannā, to light, enlighten.

Nalakh nannā, to work, lit. to do work.

Ochhor nannā, to shelter.

Pāhī nannā, to become engaged, betrothed, lit. to make friends or guests.

Poṣom nannā, to wrap up.

Sagai nannā, to take a second wife.

Sagrāī nannā, to consult the oracle.

Tīhrā nannā, to shew, initiate.

Uprār nannā, to resist.

Conhā nannā, to love.

Pangē nannā, to clear away (Jungle).

Otthāēkh mannā or ra'anā, to become or to be pregnant.

Kīrā ra'anā, to be poor; kīrā mannā, to become poor.

Urb ra'anā, to be rich; Urb mannā, to obtain riches.

Kōrē ra'anā, to be in good health; kōrē nannā, to recover health.

Ūkhā mannā, to become dark.

§ 110. From among the above nominals, such as are transitive like pāb ērnā require the noun or pronoun, which they govern, to be 'put into the genitive case:

Ēn urbas gahī pāb erālakkan, I was awaiting the master. Paṅgē nannā governs the accusative case.

Nāri kōrnā requires the dative engdas gē nārī kōrcā, my son had fever; lit. to my son the fever entered.

Nominals are also formed by combining the past participle with a noun and the auxiliary; e. g., amm onkā ra'anā, to be thirsty; likewise by adding the latter to the past participle: tarkā ra'anā, to be silent; lit. to be cut or struck.

§ 111. Compound verbs are also formed by combining two verbs, the first giving the general and the affixed or second the special meaning of the compound. The latter verb is always conjugated regularly; the former takes either the stem only or the past participle, transitive or intransitive.

These compounds are divided into several classes:—

A. Completives, which add khaenā or cukrnā either to their root or the modified form of the same, e. g.—

Es khaenā or cukrnā	}	to have done breaking.
Esā khaenā or cukrnā
Baro khaenā or cukrnā	}	to have done coming.
Barā khaenā or cukrnā

The transitives of these compound verbs require the object to be in the accusative case: ēn īdin esā khaekan, I have done breaking this; ēn āsgē asman cī'ā khaekan, I have done giving him bread.

§ 112. B. Intensives and Permissives.—These are formed by adding the verb cī'inā, to give, to the conjunctive participle of the preceding verb or to the modified stem of the same—

Hēbrar cī'inā , to throw away;	}	intensives.
Tīḍar cī'inā , to throw down;
Pīṭar cī'inā , to kill outright;
Ōnar cī'inā , to eat up.
Barā cī'inā , to allow to come, let come;	}	permissives.
Kālā cī'inā , to let go;
Ōnā cī'inā , to let eat;

Remark.—All these compounds govern the accusative.

Capnā also has an intensifying character:

Es'ā capnā, to break quickly ; es'ā cap'ā! Break quickly.

Barā capnā, to come quickly ; barā cap'ā! Come quickly.

Kālā capnā, to go quickly ; kālā cap'ā! Go quickly.

C. Potential and Impotentials.—The former are made up by the addition of the positive oṅnā, to be able ; the latter with the aid of the negative polnā, to be unable, which are added to the modified stem of the verb, as kālā oṅnā, to be able to go ; kālā polnā, to be unable to go ; ci'ā-oṅnā, to be able to give ; ci'ā-polnā, to be unable to give.

§ 113. D. Desideratives are formed by adding beddnā, to seek, and ṭuknā, to desire, to the modified stem of the principal verb. Tuknā is incomplete and impersonal ; its present or past neuter third person singular is added to the subjective noun or pronoun, which is placed in the dative case—

Ērā beddnā, ērā ṭuknā ; ēn āsin ērā beddan, I wish to see him ; ēngāge āsin ērā ṭuki ; tit. to me him to see desire is ; āsin ērā ṭukiyā, I wished to see him ; ās ethrā beddas, he wants to be seen.

§ 114. E. The Inceptive helrnā is added to the modified stem of the principal verb, viz.—Ērā helrnā, to begin to see ; kālā helrnā, to begin to go.

F. Continuative : bēṅṅnā is added to the modified stem of the principal verb ; example : ās kālābēṅṅdas, he is going continually.

Continuatives are also formed by the past participle, to which is added the auxiliary ra'anā, or the verb kānā ; viz., Ēn dhāreḱā ra'adan, I am holding fast ; emphasized ēn dhareḱā dim ra'adan, I continue to hold fast ; nān ijḱām ra'a, remain standing. Ās urb manḱas kā'adas, he is growing rich ; emphatic, ās urb manḱām kā'adas, he continues to become rich.

S.—Appellative verb.

§ 115. Appellative verbs may be formed by conjugating nouns, adjectives and the possessive case form of nouns, e.g.

Singular. Plural.

1. Pers. Ēn Kurukhan, I am an Orāo. Ēm Kurukham, we are Orāos.
 2. „ Nin Kurukhai, thou art an Orāo. Nim Kurukhar, you are Orāos.

talyan, I am the one—Compare §§ 92—94.

CHAPTER. VII.

ADVERBS.

§ 117. In Kurukh nouns, adjectives and adverbial participles may be used or taken as the equivalents of adverbs; e.g., ās kōhā lekham ethrdas, he appears great; ād khamem khamem barchī ra'ī, she has come frequently; ār pairī bīrī kā'or, they will go early, lit., morning time; ār idin akhnum darā laucar, they beat her knowingly; ār khonḍrar kī pāralagyar, having assembled, they were singing. The adverbs properly so called may be divided into four general classes: adverbs of time, of place, of manner, of affirmation and negation. They all precede the verb which they are to qualify, and almost all may be emphasized by the suffix m or im, am and em, respectively, e.g., nēlā kāom, we will go to-morrow; nēlam kāom, we will indeed go to-morrow.

§ 118.

A.—Adverbs of Time.

Pairī, early, early in the morning.

Akkū, indefinite; akkun, definite, now; even now, just now.

Onghōnum, at once, immediately, instantly.

Onghon, once, one day, again.

Urung, once^e, ^u moment, or ungur.

Iklam, once, one day; iklam iklam, sometimes.

Iklā, what or which day; aulā, that day, then.*

Iklā hō malā, never.

Ēkā bīrī; ā bīrī, when, what time; then, that time.

Gahḍī, late.

Holē, then, consequently.†

REMARKS.

* Iklā, iklam and aulā are derived from ekā, what and ullā, day; and ū, that, and ullā, day.

† The meaning of holē most probably is: being thus; compare the Hindi hōne se and the Bengālī hoile; e.g., Idin esor, holē lauon, if you break this then (that is; if it be so) I shall beat you. Bengālī: Takā hoile āmi jāibō, that being so I will go. According to this assumption holē is a borrowed-word, derived from hō, the root for to be and lē=Bengālī and gāwārī lē and the Hindi sē=ablative sign of the gerund hōnā.

§ 119.

Ā kḥanem, there and then, instantly.

Laghlem, constantly, continually.

Ullā ullā and sagarkhanē, daily, always.

Khanem, khanem, frequently, repeatedly, again and again.

Bērā bērā, precisely, punctually.

Pāṭi pāṭi, alternately (Hindi).

Sagar dān, all the day ; these of course are borrowed-words.

Sagarkhanē, always.

Innā, to-day ; innēlā, now-a-days, lately ; lit., to-day and to-morrow.

Cērō, yesterday.

Nēlā, to-morrow.

Horborē, the day before yesterday.

Nēlbeñjā, the day after to-morrow.

Huināl, three days hence ; hāhuināl, four days hence.

Mund, mund'im, previously, before, early.

Khōkhā, afterwards, later on.

Idnā, this year.

Itingalī, last year.

Munē, two years ago ; āmunē, three years ago.

Dīrī, late (Hindi) ; more properly expressed by the past form of the verb tīrnā, to delay ; in Mundārī tīrī, tere, after four days ; nin ūrkai kī barckai, you have come late, you are late.

Sadau sadau, (Hindi), ever, eternally, is better expressed by hullontī hullō gūṭī, from beginning to end.

A description of how the Kurukh reckons his time will be found in Appendix No. VIII.

§ 120.

B.—Adverbs of Place.

Īyā, īyam, isan, isānim, hisan, here, even here.

Ayā, ayam, asan, asānim, husan, there, even there.

Eksan, where ; eksānim, wherever ; also okkhō, where, like the Mundārī equivalent.

Itarā, hither, this direction ; atarā and hutarā, thither, that direction ; these are compounded from the demonstratives ī, this, ā, that, hū, that, there and tarā, direction ; tarā most likely is a borrowed-word.

Beṇḍhra'ā and caugurdī, around, round about.

Ī pakhē, this side ; ā pakhē, that side, over, across ; from the Hindī pakh, part.

Īnū, in this direction, this way ; ānū, in that direction, that way ; lit., in this, in that.

Kātī kūtī, alongside.

Cokh, side.

Sagrō (Hindī), everywhere.

Mund, mundbhārē, before, in front, in future.

Khōkhā, after, behind, in the rear.

Heddē, cākhā, hīḍī, near ;

Gechā, gecham, far, very far.

Hāḍī, yonder.

Caugurdī, all round (borrowed-word).

Camhē, in front.

Ajgō formed of ā and ujgō, that straight, i.e., thither ; also ijgō, huggō, to this place, to that place.

These latter adverbs, commencing from mund, may be called prepositional adverbs or improper prepositions, since they are also used as prepositions or rather postpositions.

§ 121.

C.—Adverbs of Manner.

Saiṅt nū, accidentally, suddenly ; also auhārī.

Khōb, khōbim (Urdū), very much.

Ajgar, dhēr, kharā, very much ; exceedingly.

Kudhā ,	}	ditto,	ditto.
Bērang
Akai
Bēdar

Baggī, taggū, much.

Dhēr and dhēr taggē, much, very much.

Kōrhē, moreover, kōrhem, very much.

Ī baggē, this much ; ā baggē, that much.

Kunā, kunī, some, a little.

Tanī kunā, tani kunī, little.

Nagad kunā, nicely.

Īdā, this much.

Āda, that much.

Īūrū, āūrū, this much, that much.

Īdātō and hanī, namely, viz., also, etc.

Urū, nādī, dot'ō, rot'ō, only, simply, mere.

Surrā, easily ; also sebr'am and algēhem.

Otkhā otkh, alone, single.

Onṭā onṭā, onḍ onḍ, ort ort, separately, one by one.

Tilē tilē, by degrees, successively.

Rāsē rāsē, slowly, by degrees ; also raftē raftē.

Karē karē, ditto, ditto ; lit., piece by piece.

Dau, daudim, well, very well.

Thaukam, very well, exactly, justly.

Īnūhō, ānūhō, nevertheless, in spite of ; lit., in this, in that also.

Ennem, ānnem, thus, in this manner, in that way.

Īlekh'am, ālekh'am, like this, like that, this and that way.

Mānim, ujgō, truly, verily.

Sūhiyam, gratis, gratuitously.

Bēgar num, in vain.

Sahajē, easily ; (borrowed word).

Oāḍē, quickly.

Chāchem, quietly.

Chāchem chāchem, very quietly, secretly.

Dhīre, slowly ; dhīre dhīre, very slowly ; (borrowed word.)

Tilē, do. ; tilē tilē.

Hīi for hī, certainly ; compare the mundāri hē, yes.

Nīdī, merely, only.

Nēkhō, nēkhō'e, endr akhō'e, perhaps, perchance, probably ; nēkhō means who knows.

Pālē pālē, separately, interchangeably.

§ 122. D.—Adverbs of Affirmation and Negation.

Ha'i, yes.

Gā, indeed, certainly.

Anti, antiyē, of course.

Hō, even, indeed.

Hū, certainly.

Janū, of course, no doubt, indeed. Illustration: īdī janū, this of course, there you are.

Mal, mal'ā, mallā, not, no.

Ambā, masc. ambai, fem. ambē (among females), do not, not!

Argā, argī, not, not yet.

The prohibitive ambā may be conjugated with the verb before which it stands, and made to correspond with it in gender and number: ās ambā or ambdas bardasnekk'ā, he shall not come; ār ambā or ambnar barnarnekk'ā, they shall not come; ād ambā or amban bar'anekkk'ā, she shall not come, don't allow her to come.

§ 123. Argā or argī, not yet, are used with verbs when the action indicated by the latter is not yet finished: ās argas barā, he has not yet come; ād argī akhā, she has not yet understood; or ās argā barcas, or argī barcas, he has not come yet; ēn argā or argī ōnkan, I have not yet eaten.

CHAPTER VIII.

POSTPOSITIONS.

§ 124. Kurukh' postpositions, for we cannot call them prepositions, are in reality nouns, and therefore declinable; when required, they may be in the form of any of the oblique cases. Some of them, especially such as are used as adverbs also, govern the preceding noun or pronoun and put it into an oblique case, chiefly into the genitive, since these postpositions are generally in the locative case; e. g., erpā gahi camhē nū, in the front of the house; nēkhai bāre nū āndai? Of whom do you speak? As khār gahi ā pakhē kēras, he went beyond the river; bēlas gahi lēkē, through the king. However, since most of the postpositions have lost their original character as nouns, they are agglutinated to the noun or pronoun without governing them and without taking themselves any case-sign; e. g., merkha mēyā on, in heaven; khēkhēl kiya, under the earth; erpā ulā, within the house; candō lekha, like the moon.

List of Postpositions.

§ 125.

Mund, mundbhārē, before, in front }
Khōkhā, khōkhā nū, behind, after } order, time and place.

Mēyā, or mēyā, above, over, on, in.

Kiyā, beneath, under, below.

Ūlā, within, in, inside.

Bāharī, (Hindī), without, out, outside.

Nū, in, among, in the midst of.

Madhe nū, majhī nū (Hindī) are also used in the above sense.

Gusan, with, at the side of, near, by.

Ganē, with, in company of, along with.

Bāri, with, together; also whilst, during.

Ī pakhe; ā pakhē, on this side; on that side; beyond.

Addā nū, instead, in lieu; also uijī nū (Urdū).

Lēkē, by, through, by means of ; perhaps derived from lēkē lekar, the Hindi past participle of the verb lēnā, to take.

Tūlē, tūlem, through, by means of.

Bēlā, without, from the Hindi binā.

Cāki, with, together.

Gustī, gustīlē, of, away from.

Tīlē, tūlē, by, through, by means of ; also trā, trī.

Gūṭi till, until, up to.

Jālā, until, up to, as far as.

Tarā, towards, in the direction of.

Birdō, birdō nū, opposite, against, contrary to.

Bāre, bāre nū, bābat (Urdū) with regard to, concerning, about.

Khatīri (Urdū) for, on account of ; khātīr.

Caḍḍē (more idiomatical) for, on account of.

Bēgar and chorāē'kē are both used for "except, without;" borrowed from Urdū and Hindi.

However, a more genuine Kurukh way of expressing this idea is by using the form of the past participle of the verb āmbnā, to leave ; e.g., idin ambar ki urmin hōā, except this take away everything.

Lekhā, like, similar.

§ 126. Elliptical sentences.—Of these, the following may be mentioned in connection with adverbs :

Endr akhō'e, nē akhō, nēkhō, for " who knows ? "

Endr nano'e, endr nanon for " what's to be done ? "

Endr nanta'adai, for " what are you going to do ? "

Ēkā gūṭi—malā—ā gūṭi, unless ; ēkā gūṭi maṇḍar malā ḍno'e, ā gūṭi kōṛē malā māno'e, unless you take medicine, you will not improve in health.

Ānāhō, nevertheless : ēn pēskan ānū hō malā kirkai, in spite of my order you did not go.

CHAPTER IX.

CONJUNCTIONS.

A.—Remarks.

§ 127.] In the list of conjunctions given below, those have been omitted which are made use of by people who have much intercourse with Hindus, viz., the Hindī ki, that; tō, then; jab je, if, etc. Their application in Kurukh is, to say the least, quite superfluous and certainly not idiomatic; thus, for example, the phrase “he did not believe that his son ran away” should not be rendered: ās malā patācas ki tanghai khadīas bongas, but tangdas bongas ās malā pattācas. In the same way the Hindī aur, and, need not be employed at all, since Kurukh has its equivalents for the same: moreover in this language conjunctions which bind two sentences are not so freely used as in some other languages, the Kurukh preferring rather the use of conjunctive participles; for example, the sentence “he was beaten and died” should not be rendered ās lauras aur kecas, but should rather be ās lauras kī kecas or lauras darā kecas.

B.—List of Conjunctions.

Arā, anti, darā, and.Muṇḍā, baakan, pahē, but, however.Anti, antilē, khanē, then.Antiyē, of course.Tā tō, gā, holē, then, hence.Kā, or and mallā, or.Darā, hō, also.Durū and durā, the same.Hō, ānūhō, even, even if, yet, nevertheless.Mak'lē, if not then.

Idātō, namely, viz., lit. this, that, then.

Āūtī, on account of, because : āūtī is composed of ā, that and ēō, much, and tī, from : that much from ; also iūtī ; these denote reason, for that or this reason.

Īgē, Āūgē, ennegē, īgē, therefore, hence, denoting purpose, for this, that purpose.

Caddē, on account of, for the sake of.

Oñghōn, again, then, moreover.

Akhā, org'ā, both meaning : as if, as it were, virtually, suppose.

Malā kā, indeed not.

Malā tā, mallā, if not then.

CHAPTER X.

NUMERALS.

§§ 129. Kurukh numerals are partly used as adjectives and partly as nouns. These numeral nouns are treated as ordinary nouns and are accordingly sometimes neuter and sometimes accompanied by the terminations of rational nouns.

The Kurukh language has four couples of original numbers, four for rational and four for irrational beings; these are Dravidian, but the remainder of the numerals are borrowed from Hindi.

The Cardinals are—

Ort , indef. masc. or fem.,	one; ortos , def. masc. only.
Ir̥b , " " "	two; ir̥bar , " " and fem.
Ñub , " " "	three; nubar , " " "
Naib , " " "	four; naibar , " " "
Oṅḍ and oṅṭā , neuter,	one.
End , "	two.
Münd , "	three.
Nākh , "	four.

EXAMPLES.—Ort ālas barcas, one man came; ort ālī barcā, one woman came; ir̥b kūkō khaddar barcar, two boys came; nub mētar barcar, three men came; naib mukkar barcar, four women came. Oṅḍ addā nū, in one place. Oṅṭā lakrā, one tiger. Ekā ortos barckas ra'as? Who, i.e., which one has come? Īd ekā ortī? Who, i.e., which one is she?

§ 130. Declension of Masculine and Feminine numerals.

N.	ort or ortos ,	one;	ir̥b ,	two.
G.	ort or ortas gahi ,	of one;	ir̥bar gahi ,	of two.
D.	ort or ortos gē ,	to one;	ir̥bar gē ,	to two.

A.	ort or ort'sin	one;	irbarin ,	two.
A.	ort or ortos ti ,	from one;	ibar ti ,	from two.
L.	ort or ortos nū ,	in one;	irbar nū ,	in two.
N.	nub ,	three;	naib ,	four.
G.	nubar gahi	of three;	naibar gahi ,	of four.
D.	nubar gē ,	to three;	naibar gē ,	to four.
A.	nubarin ,	three;	naibarin ,	four.
A.	nubarti ,	from three;	naibar ti ,	from four.
L.	nubar nū ,	in three;	naibar nū ,	in four.

§ 131. The nominative form of these numerals always precedes the noun, which it qualifies: nub ālar gahi bārē nū, with regard to three men. Nerr ort mukkan parmiyā, a snake has bitten a woman. Naib ālar ti menjas, he heard it from four men.

The nominative numeral for "one" may be used as an indefinite article, but it must be borne in mind that the Kurukh has no article, and that ort, oṇḍ and oṇṭā always mean really one in contradistinction of two or more.

The neuter numeral oṇḍ and oṇṭā also precede the noun to which they belong, whilst eṇḍ, mūnd and nākḥ generally follow it in such a manner as to form a compound word: eṅgā oṇḍ gōholā aḍḍō ra'i, I have one yoke of oxen; eṅhai gōholā eṇḍ aḍḍō ra'i, I have two yoke of oxen. Uleṇḍ manjā, two days have passed; ulmūnd manjā, it is three days, etc., but oṇḍ may also precede the noun forming a compound with it: oṇḍul ennē manjā, it happened one day.

§ 132. Distributives are formed in two different ways, viz.—

1. By repeating the numeral, as ār ort ort kōrcar, they entered one, one, i.e., one by one; ās oṇṭan oṇṭan mankhyas, he let in one, one, i.e., one by one; and

2. By putting the repeated numeral into the ablative case, viz., ār nub-nubti barcar, they came by threes.

Remark.—The English distributive ordinals, "every second," "every third" are rendered in Kurukh thus: irb nū ort, munḍ nū oṇṭā; lit. in two one, in three one; ul munḍ nū oṇḍul, every third day; lit. in three days one day. The neutral oṇṭā is used for the purpose of the specification of a plurality, viz., enḍ oḥan or enḍ oḥang ondr'a, bring two things--understood, i.e., bring two pieces, copies, etc., of the things understood. Oḥa is apparently an abbreviation of oḥṭa and oḥang.

§ 183. Proportional numbers are formed by compounding the prefix pdr with the numeral; e.g., pāreḥḍ, twice, pārmānd, thrice. The adverbial numerals "twofold," "threefold" are taken from Hindī, i.e., duharā, tiharā, etc. From five upwards the word bharī, "times," is added, which stands both for "times" and "fold"; pañcē bharī, etc., five times, fivefold.

§ 184. The Kurukh ordinal numbers are formed only from the neuter cardinals by adding antā, ntā or tā, meaning "of" or "belonging to". It must be noted, however, that the first ordinal is formed irregularly, it being not onḍantā, or enḍtā, but mūnd'tā and mūndantā, the first; the second is enḍantā or enḍtā; the third, mūndantā, mūndtā; the fourth, nākhantā, or nākhtā. William the Third is: William mūndtas, def. William the First: William mūndtas. George the Fourth: George nākhtas; the second enḍtas; but "the first man" would be: mūndtā ālās. All the rest of the ordinal numbers are formed in the same way by adding ntā or tā to the Kurukhized Hindī numeral.

§ 185. Complete list of Cardinal and Ordinal numerals from one to one hundred.

Remark.—The following table is not based on a system of counting in vogue among the Kurukhs, but is from the number ten upwards rather an attempt at Kurukhizing the Hindī arithmetical table. The list has been furnished by an Orāo gentleman; as regards the prevailing practice of counting, the student is referred to the next paragraph:—

§ 136. It must be borne in mind, however, that the genuine Kurukh way of counting is not by employing the arithmetical table, but by making use of the collective numerals: kūrī or bīso'e, score: oṅṅ kūrī or oṅṅ bīso'e, one score; kūrīeṅṅ, eṅṅ bīso'e, two scores, etc.

A division of the year and the manner how the Kurukh measures will be found in Appendix No. IX.

On the Noun.

A.—Gender and Number.

§ 138. God, spirits and men being only capable of sexual distinction, according to the conception of the Kurukh, by far the largest number of his nouns are neuter. Even in the case of animate objects he generally does not make any distinction as to gender, and speaks of a tiger or tigress as if they were neuter. The godhead, i. e., the supreme or good spirit is supposed by the Kurukh to be of the female sex, and it is only the Christian who by simply adding the definitizing as turns the feminine word Dharmē into the masculine Dharmēs. It has been said that Dharmē is of Hindi origin. However, this is doubtful: the word more probably is connected with the Magyarian word Tarmetue, creator or maker. If that be the case, the word Dharmē would mean creator, a most suitable term for God. The question how far the Dravidian is connected with the Scythian languages, of which Magyarian is a member, does not fall within the scope of this grammar.

§ 139. The fact that the Urāo, in speaking about or addressing women, makes use of the masculine form of the plural is very peculiar, and no doubt points to the position of equality women hold among these otherwise backward people.

Neuter objects being incapable of being divided into male and female according to the notion of the Kurukh, he considers consequently even a plurality of them as being a unit, a whole, a mass, and therefore speaks about a plurality of neuter objects as if it were a single one.

It is only when it is desired to mark emphatically the idea of plurality in neuter nouns that the neutral plural sign guṭhi is added. The original meaning of this suffix is from gōṭā, whole, a number, a multitude. The neutral plural guṭhi is used also in an adverbial sense, meaning et cetera: ālar guṭhi, men and so forth. Gōṭā, the whole, is also used for denoting a plurality: ēn onḍ gōṭā aḍḍōn khindkan, I purchased three heads of cattle.

Similarly, a plurality of persons is specified by adding the noun jhan, jhanar, person, persons (Hindī jan), to the numeral, viz., If one asks another: how many people have come? Ēō ālar barcar raunar? the reply will not be for example, nūb or nūb ālar barcar but nūb jhanar, three persons, barcar.

The Kurukh abstract noun may be used as an adjective, verb, adverb or postposition: khēsō, blood; khēsō, red; khēsō lekḥā, reddish; mechā, high; mechā, height; mechā nū, on the height.

B.—Case.

§140. The nominative is not provided with a case-sign in Kurukh. It is generally identical with the base of the oblique cases, the signs of which are simply added to the nominative, except in the case of some pronouns, which add the case-sign to the modified stem and not to the nominative.

The subject of the sentence, whatever it may be, noun, pronoun, etc., must always stand in the nominative case. When two substantives are placed together, the one qualifying the other, both stand in the nominative: Sōmrā naigas, Somrā, the priest; Kāsīnāth gollas, Kasinath, the landlord. The same rule applies to the names of countries, towns and rivers, etc., in which the Kurukh also, unlike the English, does not use the genitive but the nominative, in apposition to the proper noun: Bilāyat rājī, the continent of Europe; Kurkhī pādda, the village of Kurgi; Kō'el khār, the Koel river; Kūrā mahtō; Budhu chaukidār; tatkḥā man, the mango tree; Ranchi shahar; Sirī parganā.

§141. The genitive case presents some difficulty to the student, because it and is frequently employed where we would expect another case and vice versa, and is not used where we would expect it; e. g., he is deaf in one ear, must be rendered: ās gahi onḍ khēbdā mal minri'i; lit., his one ear not is being heard, or ās ontā khēbdā gahi sonḍē ra'as; lit., he is deaf of one ear.

The use of the genitive in Kurukh is rather restricted to the idea of possession. When local connection is to be denoted, the possessive case-sign ntā is used instead of gahi; paddantā pāb, the road of the village, i. e., to the village. Age also is expressed by this possessive and not by the genitive: ās nākh cānantā or cān nākh manjas, he is four years of age.

§ 142. The genitive is employed also to signify the material out of which something is made: kank gahi erpā, a house of wood, i. e., a wooden house; but the word kank may also be used adjectively; kank erpā, a wooden house.

The price at which something is bought stands in the genitive case mūnd takā gahi or takā mūnd tikhil, three rupees worth of rice; measure is signified without the genitive or any case-sign, uddūeṅṅ tikhil, two maunds of rice.

In nouns signifying relationship, the genitive case-sign is dropped and the noun compounded with the base of the pronoun: e. g., enghai my; but to say enghai das, my son, would be wrong; it should be engdas, my son; engdā, my daughter. We may say ās gahi khai, his wife, but tang khai would be more appropriate and idiomatic. In the words my father, my mother, a further exception is made with regard to the genitive case; for not only is the case-sign dropped but instead of the stem of the pronoun preceding the noun, it is made to succeed: bā, father, eng (oblique base of the pronoun I), compounded becomes bang, my father; ayō, mother, combined with eng, base of the genitive enghai, becomes ayang, my mother. This exceptional rendering, however, is quite a familiar phenomenon in the Dravidian-Scythian languages; for, according to Dr. Caldwell's Grammar, the Hungarian also says: father mine, master mine, etc. "My master" in Hungarian is uram; from ur 'master' and em or am, my.

accusative as in English, but by the dative : I have no money, engā or engā gē dhibā māḥ ; lit., to me no money is ; but “ I have money ” construed with the genitive : enghai dhibā ra’i would mean, I have got my money. “ He returned to his village ” would not be construed with the sign of the dative case, but in an elliptical way by omitting the same, viz., ās tanghai paddā kirryas. Thus : they are going to the market is : ār pēḥ kā’alagnar. The dative in Kurukh denotes also necessity : kierī engāgē cāṛ ra’i, I am in need of clothing. In other respects the dative is used in the same way as it is in English ; e.g., I gave to him, ēn ās gē cickan.

The dative is also used sometimes in a locative sense for gūṭi, till, until ; example : ār gahi ōnar barā gē nām isānim ok’ōt, lit., their having eaten to come let us sit here = ār gahi barnā gūṭi, until they come. The dative also denotes purpose and intention : ās khendā or khendā gē ka’adas, he is going to buy ; ēn ārin mēkhā or mēkhāgē ka’adan, I am going to call them.

§ 144. The accusative.—This case is often used where we would employ the dative.

Ēn isin lakṛan piṭā gē ānkan, I told him (accusat.) to kill the tiger. It should be observed that verbs signifying telling (speaking, saying) require the noun to be in the accusative case, as also permissive verbs ; e.g., let him go, āsīn kālā cī’ā, not ās gē kālā cī’ā.

§ 145. The ablative and instrumental. The principal meaning of the ablative case-sign tī is from, away from : ār Rancintī barcar, they came from Ranehi. Nim ikiyan’tī barcar? Where did you come from ? Tī also means “of,” viz., Īerpā gahi pachṛī khaj tī kamckī ra’i, the walls of this house are made of mud. It is employed also in comparisons, viz., ās engan tī kōh’ā taldas, he is greater than I ; lit., great from me ; sometimes it denotes the means by which something comes to pass, viz., as lanḍid manjkā tī kīrā manjas, he has been impoverished by being lazy.

The instrumental trū and trī and tūḷē are best translated by “through,” viz., ās kīrā trū kecas, he died from (through) starvation. Engāgē gollas tūḷē khakhrā, I got it through the landlord. Conhā tūḷē, through love ; gustīḷē is another ablative case-sign : nām ās gustīḷē ho’ōt, let us take from him; gustile is composed of gusan, with, tī, from, and lē the borrowed ablative sign.

Origin is likewise expressed by the ablative case. Ā kukkos ādigahi khekha tī ra'as, that boy is of her hands, i.e., born from her. Man pādan tī urkhī, the tree comes forth from the root. Also the word "since" may, often be translated by tī: ā bēran tī baggī ullā manjā, it is a long time since lit. that time from many days have passed.

The instrumental may be expressed by the adverb lēkē, through, which governs the genitive case: khēkhēl ānkā gahi lēkē kamrktī ra'ī, the world has been created by the word.

§ 146. The locative is used when place, time or condition is expressed: ṭōrang nū lakrā ra'ī, there is a tiger in the jungle; ēkā cān nū kundrkai, in what year were you born? sastī nū gam mōkhū ra'ā, be patient in distress. Direction also is expressed by this case: ās dongā nū argyas, he stepped into the boat. Nū is also used in comparisons; mekhō nū mankhā kōhā ra'ī, among cattle the buffalo is the biggest. Nū is really not a case-sign, but a postposition, in lieu of which other similar postpositions are employed to form the locative case, especially, gusan, with, and ganē, by.

"He is not with us," ās nam gusan malkas; and ād mētar ganē kē'ā, she went with the men. Mēyā, on, and kiyā, under, are also frequently used for the locative case-sign. From the combination of the ablative sign tī with the sign of the ablative nū and gusan, we get another form of postposition employed as a locative, viz., nūtī, nūtim; lit., from in; gustī and gustilē, from with; example: ās nūtim, from out of him; ās gustī or gustilē, from with him, corresponding to the English "out of." When direction is implied the locative case-sign is often omitted, viz. Ēn Ranchi ka'adan, not Ranchi nū ka'adan, I am going to Ranchi. Ās erpā kēras, not erpā nū kēras, he went home.

§ 147. The vocative.—This case having been explained already in the etymological part (§21), an explanation is only required for the vocative interjection ē which might be supposed to have been derived from the Hindi or Hindustāni hē or ai. This is, however, not the case, ē being a genuine old Dravidian form of the vocative interjection. Its companion ānā or ana probably means say, speak, as it is treated as a verb, being inflected according to the person and gender of the noun before which it stands; e.g., anai Urbini, O mistress or rather say mistress! anē baini guḥi-arō, O ye sisters; speak ye sisters! anā baṅg, O father, say father; anā is used also in connection with harō and kō or ko'e; anā harō, hallo, ye there! say ye there! anā kō, O thou, masc., speak thou! anā ko'e, O thou, fem., speak thou! bar'ā kō, come O thou, you! masc., bar'ko'e, come () thou, you! fem., kirkai kō? lit., didst O thou come? masc., kirkī ko'e? didst O thou come? fem. A plurality of men is addressed with harō; this is apparently derived from ār, they, the plural ending and the vocative case-sign ō: barā harō, come ye! the initial h being euphonic. In Kurukh the noun is capable of conjugation: Urban, I am a master, or I master; Urbai, thou art master, or thou master; Urbarō, you are masters or you masters: the form ai of the second person of such a conjugated noun may also be used as a vocative, without ē or anā or harō being necessarily prefixed: Urbai, O Lord, the same as Urbāyō or ē Urbāyō. Urbarō, O masters, the same as ē Urbarō or anā Urbarō. With regard to harō, it must be noted that it is generally used in addressing equals and inferiors, and is not used in addressing superiors. The plural baggā is also used in an appellative sense: nām dādā baggā; ēm dādā baggā, we elder brothers.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE ARTICLE AND ADJECTIVE.

A.—On the Article.

§ 148. There is no word in Kurukh which corresponds to the English articles a, an, the. The context only enables one to determine whether the noun is definite or indefinite. It must be remembered, however, that by affixing as or s to the indefinite noun singular it becomes always definite; this s or as, he, having therefore the force of the definite article: āl, a man; ālas, the man; kukō, a boy; kukōs, the boy. The plural is made definite by prefixing ibrā, these, and abrā, those, to the noun in a demonstrative manner: ibrā ālar and abrā ālar, these and those men. The place of the indefinite article may be supplied by the use of the numeral ort and onḍ or onḍa, one, the former for masculine and feminine, the latter for neuter nouns, at the beginning of sentences. In the same manner the indefinite pronoun nik'im is used in the sense of an indefinite article for the masculine and feminine gender and indr'im for neuter substantives; ēk'am may be used in the same way for all genders: ort ālas barcas, a man came; lit, one man came; ondul, one day, a certain time, etc., Nik'im barc kī ra'acā, a man (some one) had come; indr'im ra'acā, ādin nehō balālagyā, there was a thing, which no one knew; ēk'am bhokō ra'acas, there was a fool; ēk'am ullā nū ennē manjā; it happened some day. In these sentences man and thing are understood only, because nik'im and indr'im are not used with nouns. When it is desirable to express definiteness, the Kurukh uses the indefinite and interrogative ēkā and the demonstrative pronoun, placing them in a correlative position: Ek'am ālas barcas āsin mēkhā, call the man who came. Ēkā pūmpan ēiddakai ādin ondr'ā, bring the flower you have found. More idiomatically still this sentence will run, "Nin būddkai ā pūmpan ondr'ā."

B.—On the Adjective.

§ 149. Adjectives, being in reality nouns, can be declined, as has been shown already in the etymological part of this grammar. They serve as verbs as well: id puḍḍō, this will be too short; akkun akhyā, it has become dark now; and they may be turned also into appellative verbs and thus be conjugated: ēn kōhan, I am great or rather the great:—

Nin kōhai ,	thou art great or the great.
Ās kōhas ,	he is great or the great.
Ēm kōham ,	we are great or the great ones.
Ēm pāpham ,	we are sinners.
Nim maldāuhar ,	you are wicked.
Ās laṇḍias ,	he is an idler (idle one).
Ār malkōḇēr ,	they are unhealthy or bad (people).

Compare § 105.

§ 150. When the adjective qualifies an action of the subject with regard to some mental habit, it places the sphere of that habit in the locative case: ās taṅghaiṅ naloḅh nū laṇḍiā ra'as, he is lazy in his work. Ās jīā nū sannī ra'ās, he is humble in mind. In comparison the adjective requires the ablative, ās eṅgan tī kōhā ra'adas, he is greater than I, lit., from me he is great; ā paddā iyanṅī ēō geḅhā ra'i? How far is that village from here? See § 27.

When an adjective or word used adjectively qualifies more than one noun of different number and gender, it is made to agree with the final noun. Khāpur arā mekkhō urmi guṅḍī erpā nū kōreā, the cowherds and all the cattle have entered the cowshed. Note here that khāpur is a masculine noun, which would require the adjective to agree with it in gender if it stood alone; but as khāpur is followed in this sentence by mekkhō which is a neuter noun, the adjective is made to agree with the latter, viz., mekkhō instead of ormar.

Words used adjectively and expressing fulness are put in the ablative case; ari amṅ tī nind kī'ra'i, the pot is full of water.

It must be noted that in Kurukh the verb is often used where we would use the adjective combined with an auxiliary verb; e.g., I am tired from much walking, bagḅē ēk'na tī khayḅkan ra'adan.

CHAPTER XIV.

ON THE PRONOUN.

§ 151. Kurukh has no honorific pronoun; all persons are addressed as nān, thou; except that the word saihā is sometimes used in a honorific sense; for example, in connection with the imperative, bar'ā saihā, be pleased to come in, Sir.

If the possessive pronoun is repeated, severality is expressed thereby; ār tanqā tangā paddā kiryar, they returned to their respective villages.

§ 152. There is a peculiar way of connecting the possessive pronoun with the words for parents, children and other relatives, as will appear from the following list:—

	Singular.	Plural.
embas ,	my or our father,	embā baggar.
nimbās ,	thy or your „	nimbā baggar.
nāmbās ,	my and thy or our and your father.	nāmbā baggar.
tāmbās ,	his and their father.	tāmbā baggar.
ingyō ,	my mother.	ingyō baggar.
engdas ,	my son.	engdar & engdā baggar.
engdā ,	my daughter.	engdā baggar.
engdādas ,	my elder brother.	engdādā baggar.
ingris ,	my younger brother.	ingrī baggar.
engdai ,	my elder sister.	engdai baggar.
ingdī	my younger sister.	ingrī baggar.
engnāsgō ,	my elder brother's wife.
khadrō ,	younger brother's wife; used only in addressing her.
bāē'ālas ,	husband's elder brother.
bāē'ālī ,	„ „ sister.
erkhos ,	„ „ younger brother.
erkhō ,	„ „ sister.
ēkhlagos ,	elder brother's son.
ēkhlagō ,	„ „ daughter.
engjaunkhaddis ,	my son-in-law.

Sing. engskheddō, my daughter-in-law.

All other terms for relationship are taken from Hindī, as—engbaras, my elder (paternal) uncle.

engkākas, my younger (paternal) uncle.

engmāmus, my elder (and younger) uncle (maternal).

engtāōī, my elder (and younger) aunt (paternal).

engmasī, my (maternal) aunt.

When emphasis is intended, the full form of the pronoun is prefixed to these compounds, viz., enghai embas, my father, ninghai ningris, thy younger brother, āsgahi tangyō, his mother.

The reason of this curious combination of the possessive pronoun with the names of relatives is apparently to indicate respect or familiarity.

§ 153. The personal pronoun is often omitted in conversation or narration when the drift of the sentence or the inflectional endings of the verb leave no doubt as to the person, number and gender of the substantive; especially in replying to interrogative sentences the pronoun is omitted: nin bujhrkai? Did you understand? Bujhrkan, "understood," will be the reply. Also in questioning, e.g., eksan kā'oe? Where will you go to? The pronoun nin is left out here, because the ending of the verb clearly shows what is meant. Rāncin tī barekam kī maṇḍī oṇḍkam darā cūtkam—After we had come from Ranchi we took our meals and went to bed. In this sentence no pronoun is used.

The reflexive pronoun tān, tām, self, selves, is frequently employed alone, without a personal pronoun; the person of whom something is said being understood, for example.

Tān pēth kēras, instead of ās tān or tānim pēth kēras, he himself went to the market (not leaving this business to somebody else).

Tām malkar, instead of ār tām malkar, they themselves are not, i.e. at home or alive (though their relatives are at home or alive); the latter being understood.

Tān kicin issyas, instead of ās tānim kicin issyas, he himself wove the cloth (not giving it to the weaver, for example, being understood).

Tān cuñjālaggī, instead of ād tān cuñjālaggī, she is pounding herself i.e., doing the work herself, not leaving it to others.

Tām erpan kamor, they will build the house themselves (without the help of anybody.)

CHAPTER XV.

ON THE VERB.

§ 154. The verb always must agree in gender, number and person with the nominative or subject, e. g., in̄gyō bar'eki ra'ī, my mother has come. Tumbas keccas, his father died. Paddantā ālar sendrā bēcā gē kērar, the men of the village have gone a hunting.

On Moods.—In Kurukh the indicative, i. e., the mood of objective declaration, is frequently employed where in English we would use the conjunctive: in other words, there is no indirect but only direct speech in Kurukh; this language making only an attempt, so to speak, to form a subjunctive; e. g., “The king passed an order that the hunters should return. On their arrival he inquired from them whether they had tracked the tiger; and when they had replied in the negative, he dismissed them to their villages.” This passage would run in Kurukh literally “The king to the hunters: return! saying, ordered. They arrived; then: tiger have you tracked? saying, asked them. They said: we did not see. Then the king to them: to your villages go! saying, dismissed.” Bēlas sendrā bēcurin kīrrā bācas darā pēsas. Ar ārsyar, kḥanē lakḥan īrkār bācas kī ārin menjas. Ar bācar: malā īrkam. Antilē bēlas ārin tangā tangā paddā kalā ānyas.

§155. With regard to the infinitive mood, it must be kept in mind that its use is very limited, because in Kurukh it does not serve as in English the purpose of qualification, e. g., he is able to write, would not be rendered by the infinitive, but by compounding the verb to write and to be able, adding the inflected form of the latter to the modified stem of the former: ās tūḍā onḡdas, he is able to write. “I wish to work” is another example. Here, again, the infinitive is not to be employed, but the two verbs are to be compounded in the manner described above: Ēn nalakh nanā beddan.

On the other hand, the infinitive is used in Urāo in the same manner as in English; e. g., nimāgē kānā cār maī ra'acā, you ought not to have gone, 'it., to you to go need not was. Whenever the infinitive is combined with the auxiliary ra'anā, to remain, or mannā, to become, the idea of obligation or necessity is brought out, which is expressed by putting the principal verb in the infinitive mood, adding the inflected auxiliary and by placing the subject of the sentence in the dative case: Engāgē kānā manō; lit. to me to go will be, i. e., I will have to go. Ningāgē barnā cār ra'acā, lit. to you to come necessity was, i. e., you ought to have come.

§ 156. The participle frequently serves as a substitute for the relative pronoun and conjunctions as has been explained already, the former being entirely wanting in Kurukh, and the use of the latter being limited.

The present participle signifying duration of a secondary action whilst the principal action is going on, may be, therefore, rendered by the English whilst or during; e.g., enghai ra'anum (or ra'anūtim or ra'anum ra'anum) ās malā barōs, whilst I am present he will not come, or during my presence he will not come. There is another form of the continuative present, which is made up by using the past of a verb and putting this in the locative, e. g., enghai r'ackā num ās malā barōs, as long as I am staying, he will not come; lit. during my having been present he will not come. Similarly "whilst" is expressed by adding bārī, time, to the past conjunctive of a verb; ās ondkā bārī khatras, whilst eating he fell. To emphasize duration of a secondary action the present participle is repeated: ās cīkhā cīkhā barālagyas, he came crying crying, i. e., even whilst crying he was coming.

The past conjunctive is employed most extensively for the purpose of combining different clauses of a sentence, since copulae are avoided in Kurukh as much as possible; e.g., when he had thus spoken, he died: ennē bācas kī keccas, thus having said he died. I have lost the money, which I had earned, enghai arjāckā dhiban ebeskan, lit. my earned money I lost.

The adverbial participle expresses custom or habit, if used in an indefinite sense: ār khekhan nōrā khanem maṇḍī ḍnnar, they are accustomed to eat having washed their hands.

The past participle is also used in the sense of an adjective, which is equivalent to a noun in English; example: Have your witnesses arrived? Nimhai irkā menjka ālar ārsyar? ās irkā menjka ālas ra'as; lit., he is a having seen and a having heard man, i.e., a witness. Er̄ghai urkhhā addā; lit., my having come out place, i.e., the place which I left; the place of my exit.

§ 157. As to tenses the indefinite as in other languages denotes an action which is continuous: addō buss'un mōkhī, the ox eats straw; the present definite signifies that the action is being really performed in the present: addō buss'un mōkhāhī or mōkhālagī, the ox is eating straw.

The past tense implies that the action is completed, addō buss'un mōkhā, the ox ate the straw, i.e., has finished it, eaten up; the effects of the eating are still lasting. The imperfect denotes that the action was going on in the past, in dependency on another action: addō buss'un mōkhālagyā, the ox was eating (in the act of eating) the straw (when, for example) it was attacked by a tiger.

The perfect represents the action as independently and fully completed or finished: addō mōkhī bi'ī or mōkhī ra'ī, the ox has eaten the straw, (and has finished eating because it is satisfied). The pluperfect indicates that the action had been already completed, when another action was going on: addō bussun mōkhī ra'acā, the ox had eaten the straw (when, for example the owner came to take it to the market).

§ 158. About the use of the future tense the Ur̄āo is rather particular; he never makes use of the present definite as is done in English when the future is meant; example "I am going home (this year)." To express this sentence the Ur̄āo is obliged to employ the future, lest it be understood that he was already in the action of going. He will say therefore: ēn idnā eppā kāon: I shall or will go home (this year). Consequently all questions or affirmations, etc., regarding capability or willingness are not expressed as is often done in English by the present, but by the future tense: Are you able to go to Rāncī? therefore must not be rendered by: nīn Rāncī kālā oṅdai, but by kālā oṅgo'e? And the reply will never be: oṅdan or kādan, but oṅon, kālon or kāon.

The past future again is employed in the usual manner, denoting an action, which will have been completed when another action upon which it depends will have been performed: addō bussun mōkhā khacō, the ox will have eaten up the straw (when, etc.).

§ 159. The verb kānā is frequently added to the inflected verb as an auxiliary, and its conjugation is made to agree with the principal verb. This custom apparently has been adopted from the Hindī Grammar, in which jānā is an auxiliary verb employed in intransitive and passive verbs; e.g. ād keccā kērā, she died; kērā being the past tense of kānā; nin kirā mano'e kāo'e, you will become poor. Ār urb manjkar ka'anar, they are becoming richer; ēn saungā manou kāon, I will grow strong; kānā conveys also a continuative and progressive meaning: you will continue to be poor. I will continue to grow strong They will continually become rich.

§ 160. As in Hindī so in Kurukh neuter verbs or those having a passive sense, such as mannā, to become, and bā'arnā, to be called, require a noun in the nominative case to complete the predicate. Ād Gollas gahi khai manjā, she has become the wife of the landlord. Ār Dharmēs gahi khaddar bā'aro'or, they will be called children of God.

§ 161. On cases.—Active verbs generally govern the accusative case: to beat, to eat, to speak, to feed, to clothe, etc. Verbs indicating giving or necessity when combined with the auxiliaries to remain or to become govern the dative: Nin āsin endrgē lauckai? Why did you beat him? Nin āsman mōkho'e? Will you eat bread? Ād khaddan ontācā, She fed the child; Kicrin bānchrā. Put on your clothes.

The ablative is used with nouns signifying separation, instrumentality, origin and words, such as coming, going, passing, by way of: ā daherē tī or enghai erpa tī kalā, go passing that road, or by way of my house. The locative is frequently used with verbs denoting motion, direction, company, etc. Ā padda nū kalā, go into that village

Kurukh causal verbs as a rule govern the accusative case, even if construed with more than one object. Gollas tanghai jōkhasin manan tartācas, the landlord caused his servant to cut the tree. The causal form of the verb is sometimes used idiomatically to denote the time or duration of an action: nām bijta'a bēcōt or bij'inta'a bēcōt, let us play (dance) until dawn.

§ 162. There is a strange method, in Kurukh of emphasizing an action in the negative, i.e., by putting the modified root of the verb before its inflected form : ās ciā mal ci'idas ; lit., giving he does not give ; ērā hō malā ēnar, seeing they do not see. Nārī ambā hō malā ambī, the fever leaving does not leave. Also ēn owg'am poldan ; lit., I the to can, I not can i.e., I am entirely unable.

§ 163. There is another form for the defective verb taldan, which is a borrowed word, taken from the Gāwārī, hō-k or hēk—

REMARK.—All other tenses are formed by adding the auxiliary verb ra'anā; hēkdan ra'adan; hēkkan ra'adan; hēkkan ra'ackan; hēkdan ra'on; hēkkān ra'on.

§ 164. Instead of the optative and potential suffix nekk'a, the Urōo frequently uses, at least in some parts of the country, the suffix hūntang or ho'otang, e.g., ās bardashūntang, he may come, let him come; ār ki'anar ho'otang, they can go, let them go; ād okkyhūntang, she may sit, let her sit down, abrā mōkhāho'otang, let them eat.

REMARK.—Hūu or ho'o are inductive sounds,—in this case equivalent to let do; and tang is the base of the oblique case of the reflexive and possessive pronoun; ho'otang therefore has probably the meaning of let him (her, it) do"; ād okkyho'otang = let her sit down.

CHAPTER XVI.

ON THE ADVERB.

§ 165. Adverbs admit of declension or of being used instead of nouns: ikiyantī barckai, where did you come from? Ikānū kāon, which way shall I go? Īyantā amm; the water of this place. Maitā gahi bilī, the light on high.

From some adverbs nouns may be constructed, e.g., mēyā, on, above; maitā, height, top; kīyā, below, under; kītā, depth.

Care must be taken not to use "till" "until" as they are used in English. It would be even worse to use them as the Hindī language does, viz., as a kind of relative and correlative. One hears such phrases as ēkā gūṭī malā bar'oi, ā gūṭī ayam ra'akē, remain there till I come (jab lō māi na āū, tab lō wahā rah), but this is contrary to the idiom of the Kurukh language, in which this sentence must be expressed by argī and gūṭī; ēghai argī barnā gūṭī ayam ra'akē, lit, until my not yet to come remain there. Ēghai barnā gūṭī, would also do well. Sentences of interrogation are followed as in other languages by kā malā or not: endr, injon khēndo'e kā malā? What, will you buy fish or not? Lekhā, like, is frequently added to the stem of the pronoun and not to its full inflected form, e.g., do not say: ēnghai or nīnghai lekhā, like myself, like you; but ēnglekhā and nīnglekhā. The emphatic suffixes, im, am, dim, hō, pahē are not mere emphatics, but real adverbs, and may be best translated by such words as "above all," "even," "no doubt," "well;" pahē, by but, for.

§ 166. The emphatic dim, even, also, is sometimes used with the initial d only, e.g., instead of ās gahī dim, ās gahid. These emphatic are frequently inserted between the root or modified stem of the verb and its inflectional ending, especially by women; e.g., ēm kālā dim lag'ēm, ēm kālātag'em, we are going. Nām ollāgam lagdat, we are doing homage.

CHAPTER XVII.

ON THE FORMATION OF SENTENCES.

§ 167. In Kurukh all sentences commence with the nominative or subject and end with the verb: jōkhas cākhalagdas, the servant sows. The adjective precedes the substantive: kōhā jōkhas cākhalagdas, the great servant is sowing. The adverb precedes the verb: kōhā jōkhas pairim cākhalagdas, the great servant is sowing early (in the morning). Compare, however such phrases as: idnā baggē khēs manjā, this year we had a good harvest; cērō baggē amm possā, yesterday it rained very much. It may therefore be laid down as a rule that the position of words in a sentence is modified by the desire or want of emphasis. Thus in the above sentences, stress is laid on the time at which a certain event did occur, and for this reason the sentence commences with the adverb.

§ 168. The object takes its place before the verb and adverb respectively: kōhā jōkhas khessan pairim cākhalagdas, the great servant is sowing rice early in the morning.

A qualifying noun precedes the subject or also the object which it qualifies: gollas gahi kōhā jōkhas tanghai urbas gahi khal nū khessan pairim cākhalagdas, the great servant of the landlord is sowing rice early in the field of his master.

The reflexive pronoun follows the noun for which it stands, as seen from the above example.

The numeral precedes the noun and adjective which it qualifies: irb jōkhar, two servants, excepting proportional numbers which follow the noun, the two forming a compound word: pār, time; pār enḍ, twice; ṭākā mānd three rupees. This exception, however, is confined to neuter nouns.

Postpositions follow the noun which they govern: gollas gahi irb kōhā jōkhar tamhai urbas gahi khal nū khār gahi āpakhē ercer nūtim pairim khessan cākhalagnar—Two great servants of the landlord are sowing rice in the field of their master across the river early in the morning.

Participles precede the verb they qualify: gollas gahi irb kōhā jōkhar tamhai urbas gahi khāl nū khār gahi āpakhē erer nūtim pairim khessan cākhalāgnār, Two great servants of the landlord perspiring are sowing rice early in the field of their master beyond the river.

§ 169. Imperative sentences follow the same syntactic rules, viz., anā harō nīm irb kōhā jōkharō nimhai urbas gahi khāl nū khessan pairim cākhal'ā, O ye two great servants sow early rice in the field of your master.

Interrogative sentences follow the same rules: the interrogative pronoun preceding the nominative or subject of the sentence: endr nīm irb kōhā jōkharō nimhai urbas gahi khāl nū khessan cākhalāgdar? What ye two great servants, are you sowing rice in the field of your master?

In relative sentences we find the same rules being observed, the relative being put at the head of the first clause and the correlative in the second. Ek'am kōhā jōkhas tanghai urbas gahi khāl nū khessan cākhalāgyas āsin ayam nerr parmiyā, the great servant who was sowing rice in the field of his master was bitten there by a snake.

From the above it will be seen that when a sentence contains one or more clauses, the nominative always takes the first place and the all-governing finite verb the last.

§ 170. The Kurukh language being devoid of relative pronouns, forms its relative sentences in the following particular ways, viz.—

- (a) By using the demonstrative pronoun to supply the connection with that clause of the sentence which would require the relative pronoun, e. g., ēn cēro irkan ā naigas innā kiryas, the priest whom I saw yesterday has returned to-day; lit., I yesterday saw that priest to-day came again.
- (b) By employing adjective particles with the subject, the relative sense is likewise idiomatically expressed: Ning lekhā landiā lassiarin malā uidan, I do not employ labourers who are so idle as you are; lit., thee like lazy labourers not I employ.
- (c) More frequently, however, the relative sentence is constructed by subjoining the present or past participle or the infinitive form of the adjectival verb to the subject of the sentence;

Rāncī nū kundrkā khaddas isim tablas, the boy who was born at Rāncī is this one. Urbas barū ra'acas endr hūsim taldas? What is that one the saheb who was to come? lit., the saheb a comer was, what that one is? Cēp pōenā ra'acā ād malā possā, the rain which was about to come did not come; lit. rain to rain was that not rained.

(d) By far the most usual manner of forming a relative sentence, though it is not idiomatic Kurukh is by employing an indefinite or interrogative pronoun for the relative and adding a demonstrative as correlative, e.g., ēk'am ālas barckas ra'acas āsin irkar? Did you see that man who had come? lit.: What man had come him you saw? Ēkā ullā nīm āttī ōnōr ā ullā nū khēor, on what day you will eat of it, you will die. Endran nīm nēor ādin nimā gē ci'on, whatever you will ask that I will give you.

Regarding the employment of the Hindi-Gaḥwāri je and se, see 56.

§171. About the subordinate clause of manner "as though," "as if" or "as it were."

This kind of subordinate clauses is expressed by affixing the adverbial lekhā to the different tense forms of the verb, e. g., the clouds look as if it would rain, bādāli cēp pōenā lekhā ēthr'is; lit.: The clouds to rain like appear. He ate as though he had not got anything for days, ās baggē ullā nū mal khakhrkā lekhā ōnālagyas, lit., he many days in not having received like eats. His hair has been cut as though rats had nibbled at it, osgā gahi parmā lekhā as gahi cuttī khaṇḍrā kērā, lit., Rats bitten like his hair has been cut. He speaks as if he had been many years at school, ās baggē cān gūḥi skūl nū ra'ackā āl lekh'am kaenakrdas, lit.: He many years till in school having been one like speaks.

Don't assume an air as though you knew nothing of the theft, lit., Theft with regard to non-knower like form don't take hold of (assume.) Khalbnā gahi bāre nū malākhu lekhā muḥā ambkē dharā. He slept as if he were dead ās keekā lekham khāndralagyas, lit.: He dead like slept I arrived here as though in a dream, Sapnā ērnā lekhā iyam ārskan be'edan, lit., dream seeing like here I arrived. They spend the money as if it had no value at all, ār ṭakkan mullimalkā lekhā khare nannar, lit. They money not value like spend. He was in a dream as it were, ās sapnā nū ra'ur lekhā ra'atagyas, lit. He dream in being ones like was She was half dead as it were, ād adhkhe'enā lekhā manjā, lit., she half dying like became.

§172. Restrictive clauses are formed by adding the locative case-sign nū and the postposition bārē, bārē nū, regarding, concerning, to the verb: As far as I know, he did not come, ās gahi barnā gahi bārē nū ēn baldan, lit., his coming regarding I do not know. As for that matter he knows nothing about it; ā kathā gahi bārē nū ās onṭan hō baldas, lit., that word concerning he not even one knows. The restrictive meaning is also rendered by the conjunction gā; for example: as for getting drunk, I have no pice to buy liquor. Unkh'on'gā malā unkh'on, engāgē arkhi khendā gē dhibā hō mal-malā lit., I shall get drunk, then not I shall get drunk, to me buying for pice not even is. As regards Christians, they do not worship demons; Kristān ālar gā nādān malā mānnar; lit., Christians then demons do not worship.

It must be borne in mind that all these sentences are more or less elliptical.

§ 173. Final clauses. - In forming these it is necessary to remember that in Kurukh there is no such thing as indirect speech, but that the words of a third person must always be quoted in the direct form; for example: He said that he would go to-morrow, in order to fetch money: ās dhibā ondrāgē nēlam kā'on bācas; lit., He pice to bring to-morrow I shall go said. He always frightens me because he says that he will beat me; cingan lauon lādas āṭṭi sagar kharē engan elktā'adas, lit. Thee I will beat says that from (therefore) always me causes fear. He gave us some rice that we might have to eat on the way; Daharē nū mōkhor bācas igē emāgē jok ṭikhil cikas; lit., Road on they will eat said this for to us some rice gave. In order to become rich he is working day and night: Urb manon bācas āūgē ās ulla mākhā nalakh nanālagdas, lit., Rich I will become said, that for he day and night works. He gave us a rope in order that we might take water from the well; tūsanṭi amm ondr'or bācas, igē ās emāgē ēp cikas ra'as, lit., Well from water they will take said, this for to us rope has given.

§ 174. It will be evident from the following examples how causal clauses are avoided by the Kurukh, who prefers direct speech: He has beaten me, though I have done him no harm; ās gahiŋ ontan hō malā bagra'ckan ra'adan ānū hō enyan buckas ra as, lit., his not one I spoiled, that in also me has beaten. Although we ran as fast as we could, we were unable to catch the thief; sawang ra'naā lekhaŋ bongkam ra'ac'kam, ānū hō khal'usin polkam dhar'ā, lit., might having like run we did, that in also the thief we not could catch. Though we possess riches, all of us must die; Urb manjkā num hō nām ormatgē khē'enā marō, lit. Rich being in also to us and you, all to die will be. You know little, although you have studied many books; baggi puthin parhckā nū hō nūn jokim jokim akhda, lit. many books having read in also thou little little knowest. It will rain soon, because it thunders. Cēp poēyō badālī murrā taggi, lit. It will rain rain, the clouds are thundering. I cannot split this wood because I have no axe. Ī kankan palkā poltan, enggusan tongē malā, lit. This wood split I cannot, with me ax not is. He gave me some medicine because I had fever: Ās enḡāgē mandar cicas, enḡāgē nārī kōrckī ra'acā, lit.: He to me medicine gave to me fever had entered. On account of the storm it was impossible for us to cross the river: Tākā tāgrkī ra'acā, khār gahi āpakhē polkam katḡā, lit. Wind was blowing, rivers that side we could not cross.

In the three latter type of sentences one hears sometimes the conjunctions igē, āḡgē or even the Hindi kāran employed, but this does not appear to be idiomatical.

§ 175. Circumstantial clauses of time are formed in different ways, as will be seen from the following examples: When my father was still alive, we used to cultivate these fields; Embās gahi ujnā bārī em ibrā kballan usskam ra'abngkam lit., my father's living whilst, we these fields used to plough. Since this landlord came here, we had to give it up. Ī gollus barcas kbanē emāgē ambnā ra'acā, lit., This landlord came then to us give up was. When we had taken our supper then all of us went to bed; khartin onḡam kī orman cūtkam, lit., Supper having eaten we all slept. When you have washed your hands, bring my breakfast; khbekhan nōrā'ark enghai luhārin ondr'ā, lit., Hands having washed, my breakfast bring- When the bell rings come all to church; ghanḡā kharkhō bīri ormar girjā barā, lit., Bell-sounding time all church come. How did you plough when you had no oxen? Adḍō mal ra'acā ākhanem ekāssē usskai bē'edai, lit., Oxen not were, that upon how did you plough? At the time when I was teaching this boy, he was not lazy at all. Ēn ī kukosin sikkābāckā ra'alagan, ā bēṛā nū landiā malā ra'acas; lit., I this boy teaching was, that time in lazy not was.

§ 176. Consecutive sentences are formed in the same way as the above-mentioned clauses, i. e., by employing chiefly the past participle. In consecutive sentences the form of the past participle is treated as a verbal noun, being put into the ablative case; for example: Ās gusan dher tākā ra'ackāt ās paddan khēndā ongos; lit., with him much money being from he a village purchase will be able, hence: he has much money, so that he can purchase a village. These sentences are also formed similarly to the way in which final clauses are formed: I have brought these that you might examine them: Nīnghai parkhāgē ibṛan ondrkan ra'adan, lit., Your examining for, these I have brought. The use of the final or consecutive "that," Hindī "ki" is not in vogue in genuine Kurukh speech, for wherever in English or Hindī "that" or "ki" would be employed, the Urāo simply puts the clauses together as correlative ones without employing a particle, e. g., Let us run away that the tiger may not get hold of us: must be rendered Bongōt harō lakṛā ambā dhar' annek'ā lit., Let's flee, tiger not may take hold. Hasten to get home, that darkness may not overcome you; Ēṛpā kalā capā, nimāgē ambā ūkhanek ā, lit., Home go quickly, to you it may not get dark. Take this vessel home carefully, so that it may not break, ī arin erpā ērkē hō'ā ambā khotirān nek'ā, lit., this vessel house carefully (seeing) take, it may not break.

CHAPTER XVIII.

On the derivations and the formation of words.

§ 177. The Kurukh language being agglutinative, there is, strictly speaking, no derivation of words in its grammar. The noun serves as adjective and vice versâ, and there are only a few abstract nouns. Dau is good and also goodness, kîrâ, poverty, famine, kîrâ also is poor and poorly; innelâ i râjî nû kîrâ khutrâ, there is a famine at present in this country; âs kîrâ âl taldas, he is a poor man; âs kîram ujjdas, he lives poorly.

Pairî means daybreak or the early morning, but it is used principally as an adverb âs pairî ârsyas, he arrived early i.e., early in the morning; khôkhâ, after; câkhâ, near; ulâ, inside, etc., are postpositions, which are used as nouns as well as adverbs; khôkhâ nû, in the rear; câkhâ nû, in the vicinity; ulâ nû, in the interior; as khôkhâ barcas, he came after; âd câkhâ ra'i, she is near; âr ulâ ra'anar, they stay inside. From these few examples it will be seen that there is not much room in the Kurukh language for the formation of words.

§ 178. There is, however, this peculiarity that nouns may be turned into verbs (a)—by simply adding the inflections of the verb, e.g., êkh, shade, hence êkhdan, êkhdai, êkhdas, I shade, thou shadest, he shades etc., Khalb, thief, theft; hence âr khalbnar âr khalbyar, âr khalbor, they steal, they stole, they will steal, (b) If the noun ends in a vowel, it is dropped and the inflection is added to the preceding consonant; e.g., ûkhâ, darkness, hence eliding the final a we conjugate Ūkhî it is getting dark, ûkhyâ, it has become dark, ûkhô. it will get dark. Khondhâ, gathering, assembly; drop the â and inflect khondkan, khondôr, khondkat, I have gathered, they will gather, we and you have gathered.

It has been previously explained how the noun of agency is formed, i.e., by simply adding the vowel û to the base of the verb, e.g., timb, beg, timbû beggar; ûnkhl, to get drunk, ûnkhû drunkard; pâr, sing, pârû, singer. Ci, give, hence ci'û, giver, nan, to do, hence nanû, the doer; kam, make hence kamû, the maker, creator.

§ 179. The noun of agency may serve as an adjective, irū alas, the seeing man; kharū jōkh, a thieving servant; khū ālar, mortal man.

The infinitive of the verb stands for the abstract noun ērṇā, to see, hence ērṇā, the seeing, the review, observation; onnā and mōkhnā, both meaning to eat; when taken together they mean food, support.

Nouns are formed by the employment of the past participle kā, added to the base of a verb, viz., gachrnā, to promise, gachrkā the promise, covenant: agreement; ānnā to say ānkā, the word; ērṇā, to see, mennā, to hear: hence irkā menjkā, witness.

§ 180. By prefixing the abbreviated form of the negative adverb malā, i.e., mal. to verbs or adjectives, we get another kind of compound—

Mal munjrnā, not ending, endless, eternal,
Mal saūngiā, not strong, weak, feeble.

By adding malā or malkā to nouns or adjectives, we get another series of derivatives: khadd malkā childless, barren; munjāmalkā, endless, eternal.

By adding the possessive locative affix antā, or ntā to nouns, we get still another kind of derivatives: merkhantā, heavenly; ullantā, daily; also by adding lekhā, like: pandrūlekhā, whitish, etc. Maitā, height, and kitā depth, are derived from mēyā and kiyā, “high” and “low” and antā or, ntā or tā, “belonging to.” Compare § 26.

§ 181. There are no diminutives in Kurukh; but we find that one of the Hindī diminutive forms used sometimes is; e.g., from chōtā, small, young: cutkā, the little one, the youngest. This is in Kurukh sannī, small; hence sankā, the little one, the least.

The abbreviation of leknā, like, i.e., lē is also sometimes employed as a diminutive: kōhālē, lit; the greatlike, pretty large.

Diminutives are further formed by adding the word khadd to the noun; e.g., allā khadd, a little dog; pitri khadd, a small mat; khoppā khadd, a small hair tuft; cācā khadd, a small stone; binkō khadd, a small star.

The adjective sannī may be used generally in forming diminutives, e.g., sannī man, a small tree; sannī ērat, a small bow; sannī tong'ē, a small axe.

See also the paragraphs on the formation of the passive voice, causal and reciprocal verbs, and on the formation of transitives and intransitives—

ALLITERATION.

§ 182. The Kurukhs are fond of reduplicating syllables for example :

- arbarparbar*, neighbours ;
ayābāyā, delirium ;
banai banai kē, thoroughly ; from the Hindī banā banākē.
bīlbinā, to clear up ;
bīlbinā, to shine dimly ;
bhukur bhukur, violently ;
cadgad-napudgad, a good-for-nothing fellow ;
caṭcaṭrṇā, to crackle ;
cēhecēhelam, vehemently ;
cīkhecīkḥrṇā, to sob ;
ciyam ciyam-ba'anā, to chirp ;
corokḥ corokḥrṇā, to suck ;
dihir dihirnā, to stamp ;
dorōporō, vice ;
dhundur-musuṛ, negligent, naked ;
jadfadrnā, to cackle ;
ghacpac, surprised, perplexed ;
haṇḍhaṇḍrṇā, to become empty ;
hudr hudrṇā, to make a snapping noise ;
hurukjuruk, enchantment ;
irsī birsī, different, sundry ;
jerem kerem, with all ones might ;
julpulhem, early in the morning ;
jhakjhakrṇā, to glitter ;
jhalaṅg jhulung, staggering ;
jhankar jhunkur, reeling, staggering ;
kala^b kaṭabrṇā, to be in want of food ; Hindī kalāpnā ;

- kalkalumba'anā*, to tease ;
kankanamba'anā, to irritate ;
konkrō bonkro, crooked ; also konkō bonkō, Bengali bānkā, bent kundrmundr, protest ;
lambaṛ lumbur, quickly ;
laram lurum, greedy ;
hundrhundrā, wide ;
luphuprā, trembling ;
nohortohor, preserving ;
olehnā cikhnā, lament ;
pulnipulni, soft ;
sōrad sōrad, carelessly ;
thāpāthūpū, flat footed ;
ulukbuluk, confounded ;
urūpurū, straightway.

PART III.

APPENDICES.

APPENDIX I.

On the Dravidian characteristics in the Kurukh Grammar.

The principal characteristics of the Dravidian languages are, according to Dr. Caldwell, the following. They are in the first place agglutinative. This characteristic is found in Kurukh, which expresses grammatical relations by means of affixed words, which maintain throughout their original character. The Dravidian noun has only one declension. This is just the case with the Kurukh noun. The Kurukh also divides his nouns into rational and irrational; the latter being neuter, whether they be animate or inanimate. The plural for masculine and feminine nouns is identical, and the neuter noun has, strictly speaking, no plural. As in Dravidian languages, so in Kurukh, the personal pronoun, plural number, has a collective plural besides, which includes the first and second persons. The endings of the inflected noun are nothing but personal pronouns added to them. The nominative singular has no case-sign, and those of the oblique cases are added to it or to the modified stem without any connecting link whatever. Adjectives in Kurukh as in all Dravidian languages are mere nouns of relation or quality, which are prefixed to the substantive without alteration. The comparison of adjectives is formed in the true Dravidian style by placing the adjective to be compared in the nominative and the noun or pronoun with which it is compared in the ablative case. The Kurukh has no relative pronoun, and no third person personal pronoun—very characteristic Dravidian features.

The structure of the Kurukh verb is, like that of all Dravidian verbs, agglutinative: first the root, then the voice characteristic or causation particle, after this the tense characteristic, and finally the pronominal ending, denoting person, gender and number. The Kurukh verb has only one conjugation, like its sisters of the Dravidian family.

APPENDIX II.

Connection of Kurukh with other Dravidian languages.

List of Dravidian words and roots in Kurukh as found in Dr. Caldwell's Comparative Grammar.

It is not necessary to prove the connection of Kurukh with the Dravidian family of languages, but a list of some of the words which are common to all of them, may be of interest—

NOUNS.

Bā ,	father.	Ayō ,	mother.
Khan , kan ,	eye.	Bai ,	mouth.
Pall ,	tooth.	Mulī ,	nose.
Khekkhā ,	hand.	Khedd ,	foot.
Mūkul ,	knee.	Kūl ,	belly.
Tuppā .	spittle.	Ahrā ,	flesh.
Āl ,	man.	Āli ,	woman.
Pell ,	girl.	Bēl ,	king.
Urb ,	master.	Paddā ,	village.
Pēt .	market.	Aḍḍō ,	ox.
Ērā ,	goat.	Injō ,	fish.
Furrā ,	dove	Khākhā ,	crow.
khār ,	river.	Man ,	tree.
Pūmp ,	flower.	Pannā ,	iron.
Kolkoll , khāl ,	field, stone.

ADJECTIVES.

Tinī ,	sweet.	Kārū ,	black.
Bilī ,	bright.	Kīrā ,	old, weak, poor, hungry.
Paivā	cold.	Paccā .	old.
San , sanni ,	small.

PRONOUNS.

Ēn, I ; nīn, thou ; ēm, we ; tām, self.

NUMERALS.

Ort and ond, one ; irb and enyd, two.

VERBS (ROOTS).

Bar ,	come.	Ēk ,	walk.	Khoss ,	dig.
Ān ,	say.	Pār ,	sing.	Pēs ,	order.
Khar ,	steal.	Man ,	be.	Mulkb ,	sink.
Bīi	boil.	Ōl ,	burn.	Nind ,	fill.
Nūj ,	pain.	Okk ,	sit.	Khuṭ ,	tie.
Khod ,	distribute.	Khat .	divide.	Khond ,	gather.

Nad, nad, dance ; nāl nār.

ADVERBS.

Innā, to-day ; nēlā, to-morrow ; malā, not.
Agi, argi, not yet.

POSTPOSITIONS.

Ūlā, within ; kiyā, below ; mune, mund, before.

Other points of interest will be found in the grammatical similarities between Kurukh and other Dravidian languages, e. g., the plural suffix of rational nouns in Kurukh is ar, whilst in Tamil it is ar, in Telugu āru and in Kanarese aru.

The case sign of the dative in Kurukh gē however may not only be compared with the Telugu kī and the Kanarese gē, but also with the Bhōj-pūri and Bengālī kē ; we have here most probably an instance of Dravidian grammar having influenced the grammar of the language of Aryan peoples. The accusative case in Kurukh is n or in, which may be compared with nī and n in Telugu. The ablative case in Kurukh ends in tī ; in Goṇḍī and Kui it is ṭai.

The Kurukh personal pronoun first person singular is en, plural ēm and nām; in old Kanarese it is ēnu, ēmu and nēmu respectively, in old Tamil nān, yām and nām. In old Kanarese the personal pronouns for the second person, nīn, nīm, together with the reciprocals tān tān, are quite identical. The personal pronouns ās and ād, he, she, it, are apparently connected with the Telugu vādu and adī. The characteristic of the past tense of the verb ek or c'a may be compared with ei in Telegu and Gonḍī as well as with the sa of the Koravā dialect. In the future tense the Kurukh verbs end in ō, whilst corresponding suffixes in Tamil and Kanarese are u and v respectively. The numerals ort, masc., one, and ond, neut.; onḍ may be compared with the Tamil oru and onru; also with the Telugu okadu and onḍu respectively. Koravā has ort and onḍ, the same as Kurukh. The orb and irbar, two or both, are similar to the Tamil iruvar and the Kanarese ibbaru. The Kurukh enḍ two, neut., is identical with the Tamil reṇḍu and iraṇḍu and the Kanarese eradu. The Kurukh nubar, three, masc., corresponds with the Tamil mūvar and the Kanarese mūvaru. The Kurukh word for three, neut., is mūnd, which is identical with the Tamil mūnru, mūndru and mūndū. Kurukh naibar, four, masc., corresponds with nalvar in Tamil and with nālvaru in Kanarese; nākḥ, four, neut., to the Kanarese nālku and the Telugu nālugu. The ordinal mūnda, first, is identical with the Telugu mōdatā.

APPENDIX III.

Similarity of Kurukh and Maltô.

Apart from a difference in pronunciation the Kurukh and Maltô Vocabulary is almost alike. These two languages, moreover, are closely related, grammatically. They have no separate feminine singular, but use the neuter instead, and their nouns have no separate oblique case. The case-suffixes are almost identical and the personal pronouns in each of them are quite the same, which may be said also of the tense characteristics.

CASE-SIGNS :

	Kurukh.		Maltô
	Singular.	Plural.	Singular.	Plural.
N.	—	ār.	ēh	• ēr.
G.	gah	ārgahi.	ēki	ērki
D.	gē	ārgē.	ēk	ērik.
L.	nū	ārnū.	nō	ērinō.

NUMERAL ADJECTIVES.

Ortos , ort , masc., fem.,	one :	ortē and ortī ,	one.
Irb , masc., fem.,	two :	ibr , masc., fem.,	two.
Oṇḍ , neut.	one :	oṇḍ , neut.	one.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

En ,	I ;	ēn ,	I.
Nīn ,	thou ;	nīn ,	thou.
Ēm ,	we ;	ēm ,	we.
Nīm ,	you ;	nīm ,	you.

DEMONSTRATIVES.

In Kurukh - is, ās, īd, ād, he (this one, that one), she, it (this one, that one).

In Mältō—ih, he ; ih, fem. and neut.

In Kurukh īr, ār, they (these ones, those ones), masc. and fem.

In Mältō : īr both for masc. and fem.

The reflexive tān and tām is in both languages alike.

INTERROGATIVES.

Kurukh.

Mältō

Nē, ekā, endr, nēk, who, which, what ; nē, īke, indr, nēk.

TENSE CHARACTERISTICS.

Past tense, Kurukh : ka ; in Mältō k.

Imperfect, „ ā ; „ ā.

APPENDIX IV.

Topical differences in Kurukh.

It has been shown in the introductory remarks that Kurukh is spoken not only in Chota Nagpur but also in the Central Provinces, Orissa, Behar, Assam and other parts of India, though under different names. The Author has personally visited the so-called Bergē-Orāos in the Gangpur State, to inquire into the difference of their speech from standard Kurukh. This difference is very small, and may be summed up in the statement that where standard Orāo has the guttural kh, the Bergē-Orāos pronounce it as h, e.g. — Kurukh khēkhēl is in Bergē-Orāo lēhēl, earth.

„	khēkhā	„	„	„	hekhā , hand.
„	khēdd	„	„	„	hedd , foot.
„	mankhā	„	„	„	manhā , buffalo.
„	khōḍnā	„	„	„	hōḍnā , collect.
„	khōkhā	„	„	„	hōhā , after.

The Kisāns and dhangars of the Central Provinces and Orissa pronounce the j of the characteristic in the past tense of the verb c, thus nanjas in standard Kurukh is pronounced nancas; menjas, mencas; the short ā is pronounced long probably to avoid the broad pronunciation of the vowel in Oriyā. There are other slight differences in the pronunciation, e.g., the e in endr is pronounced i = indr; the ending of the future ō is pronounced ū, e.g., instead of kāō, these people will say kāū. This change of the vowel o is also met with in the base of verbs commencing with a, thus attnā, to put on, to dress, in standard Kurukh, is with them ottnā; ānnā becomes ondnā, okknā, ukknā etc. The cases-sign of the genitive in Kurukh is gahi which in Orissa and the Central Provinces is pronounced ghī, qhē, kē, ē, hī and ī. It is probable that i or e are the original forms of this case, and that gh, g, k and h are only euphonic additions. A more important difference is found in the tense characteristic of the perfect, where manjkai becomes manckedāe; menjkar, menckedue. This kedae is borrowed apparently from Mundārī. The most important difference however, is in the auxiliary verb to be. Thus ēn bē'edan or ra'adan in standard Orāo is with those people atlan, I am; atlae, thou art, atlas, he is,, atlī, she, it is.

APPENDIX V.

Is Muṇḍārī connect.d with the Urāo language?

Dr. Sten Konow has taken exception to the theory propounded by the Author in the first edition of this grammar that Muṇḍārī is a Dravidian language and is thus connected with Kurukh. It is now generally admitted by scholars that the Muṇḍā tribes belong ethnologically to the Dravidians; this fact has been proved by anthropometrical investigations carried out on the largest possible scale, and consequently a relationship between the Kurukh and Muṇḍārī languages would not appear improbable; moreover, there is a large number of words which are used in common both in Kurukh as well as in Muṇḍārī and connected languages, not merely borrowed words but words which cannot be derived from other sources; and last but not least, there are features in the construction of the grammar of either language which seem to support the theory of relationship.

The suffixes of the noun in its declension are similar in both languages; the dative sign in Kurukh is gē and that of the ablative tī, whilst in Muṇḍārī it is kē and tē respectively. The division of nouns into rational and irrational in the former and into animate and inanimate in the latter is though different yet practically the same. Either language possesses the double plural, one in which the speaker excludes the person spoken to and one in which he is included. There is, however, no dual number in Kurukh as we find in Muṇḍārī but, on the other hand, the Jūāng, the Savāra and Godabā languages also have no dual, though they are branches of the Muṇḍā family of languages.

Adjectives are of the same character in Kurukh and in Muṇḍārī: in both they are in reality nouns.

The pronoun first person singular appears to be strikingly similar in both languages; it is īng in Muṇḍārī and en in Kurukh with the oblique base eny. The pronominal suffix for the third person in the verb is in several Dravidian languages ā and as or ae, whilst in Muṇḍārī it is ae, meaning in both he or she. The infix tā in Muṇḍārī and the possessive pronoun tān in Kurukh have the same meaning, e.g., sadom tāng my own horse, in Muṇḍārī, is taṅghai ghorō, his own horse in (Kurukh). Then again, the way in which the possessive pronoun is connected with words denoting relationship is in both languages alike ; the only difference is this, that in Muṇḍārī the pronoun is added to the noun, whilst in Kurukh it is prefixed ; e.g., in Kurukh embas my father ; in Muṇḍārī apuṅg, etc. The emphatic suffix m and gē or gā are in both languages the same ; e.g., in Muṇḍārī we say : aiṅg gē, even I ; in Orāo ēngā ; in Muṇḍā gāpām senoāṅg, even to-morrow I shall go ; in Kurukh nēlām kāon. Relative clauses and interrogative sentences are formed in Muṇḍārī almost in the same way as in Kurukh ; for other similarities see next appendix.

Yet in spite of all these similarities Professor Sten Konow comes to the conclusion that they can be explained otherwise and that they do not furnish sufficient proof of the connection of the Muṇḍārī language with the Dravidian group. In putting forward his theory the Author himself in the first edition of this grammar did not attach much importance to the coincidences in the vocabulary, since these can be explained by the mutual influence these two languages have exercised upon each other through their close contact for centuries, though he laid stress on grammatical affinities. However, even these can be explained otherwise, as shown by the learned Professor ; for example, Dr. Sten Konow ascribes the similarity of case-signs in these languages to the influence of Aryan speeches on both of them alike.

According to the same authority the adjective has the same character in all agglutinative languages—not only in Kurukh and Muṇḍārī. Again, the real base of the pronoun first person singular being in Muṇḍārī n, it is impossible to connect it with the base ē of the Dravidian languages. In the examination of the formation and conjugation of the verb Dr. Sten Konow fails to see any trace of analogy between Muṇḍā and Kurukh, the similarity met with here and there being only apparent, not real. The learned philologist sums up his investigation by declaring that the Muṇḍās and Dravidians belong to the same ethnic stock, though the physical type is not uniform throughout, but that the languages of the Muṇḍās and Dravidas are not connected, and form two quite independent families ; the former agreeing in many points with various forms of speech in Further India, the Malay Peninsula and the Nicobar Islands, and the latter forming quite an isolated group.

APPENDIX VI.

List of words used in common by Urāos and Muṇḍāris in Chota Nagpur.

A, Nouns.

Twenty.	kūrī.	kūrī (Hindī).
Postpositions
Towards.	tarē.	tarā.

REMARK.—These lists of words might be increased considerably, since the number of words in common use in both languages is about one-tenth of the vocabulary.

APPENDIX VII.

Words in Kurukh borrowed probably from Bengali or Oriya.

Bengali.	Kurukh.
Aī , adv., yonder ;	ahai .
Āiō , a married woman ;	aiō , mother, elderly woman.
Gach , to agree, deposit ;	gach , to agree, promise.
Jāop , bush ;	khoppā , bush.
Torang , a raised place ;	torang , barren, elevated ground.
Thaukā , adv., altogether, whole ;	thaukā , whole, right.
Thū , spittle, thū , interj., fie ;	thū thū , fie, fie !
Danū , dānā , danō , an evilspirit ;	dānu , dānā , danō , a demon.
Dirgha , adj., long, extended ;	dighā , long, extended.
Banka , adj , crooked, bent ;	bōnkō , crooked, bent.
Mosh , v., to wrench ;	moc , wrench, cut asunder, cut in two.
Mosān , cemetery ;	masrā-gaddi , cemetery.
Būk , breast, stomach ;	bukkā , breast, heart.
Mish , v., to mix, to unite ;	mesnā , unite, receive.
Mūd , mādon , the closing of a wound, eyes, a hole, etc.	mūd , mādnā , to close, shut a door.

APPENDIX VIII.

TIME RECKONING OF THE KURUKHS.

A.—Day-time.

Khēr cīkhō bīri,	when the cook crows.
Bijō bīri, biṭa'ā,	at dawn.
Ōṛ cucuhia cīkhō bīri,	when the birds begin to chirp.
Ōṛ juḷpulhem,	ditto ditto.
Cō'o bīri,	at rising time.
Bīri argnā (bērā),	at sunrise.
Pairi, pairim,	morning, early.
Gōholā pundnā bēṛā,	time to yoke the oxen.
Laṇḍi luhāri,	early breakfast.
Luhāri bīri,	breakfast time.
Kukkeapō,	midday, noon.
Arti bīri,	afternoon, water-fetching time.
Elkhrnā bīri,	when the sun inclines.
Bīri puttā (bērā),	at sunset.
Bīṛ puttā,	the whole day, from morning to evening.
Ūkhnā bēṛā,	at dusk.
Khurṭi bīri,	supper time.
Khurṭi bīnkō bēṛā,	the time of the evening star, late supper time.
Cūtō bīri,	time to go to bed.
Mākhā,	night.
Īdhī mākhā,	midnight.

B.—The Kurukh year.

The Urāo divides the year (cān) into lunar months (candō): each month as two parts, viz., bīli mākhā, bright nights, and ūkhā mākhā, dark nights; unnā candō is new moon or beginning of the month; punai is full moon.

The names of the months are taken from the Hindus, but the year is divided into the following seasons :—

Sendrā candō, spring time; lit., hunting time, from February to the middle of March.

Bīṛnā gaḥ, hot season; from the middle of March to the beginning of June.

Ēkhā gaḥ, rainy season; till the middle of September.

Cirdā gaḥ, harvest time; till the end of November.

Paīā ullā, cold season; December and January.

important events in the family life are counted from these seasons, and more particularly from festivals or from some political event, such as the rebellion of the Kōls in 1832, (larḳā) or the Mutiny in 1857, (ulgulan), etc. e.g., Larḳā cān nū benjṛālakkun, in the year of the Larḳā (Rebellion 1832) I got married.

APPENDIX IX.

Kurukh measures.

Of measures the Urāos have very few:

Ond aṛkā, one paila, about one pound (for grain).

„ ṭoṅkī, about five pounds (for grain).

„ laugī, about 20 „ „

„ uḍḍū, one maund (mān) or 80 pounds (for grain)

Mūli, chapter, lit., root, H.

Karī, verse, lit., part, H.

Mukā, elbow (hāth: Hindi).

Sobbā, a handful.

Ond pastī, both hands full.

Ond ḍhōk, one spoonful.

Ond kani, the eighth part of a pauā of land.

Ond kanuā, the fourth part of one pauā of land.

Aḍpai or ādhā pauā, half a pauā.

Kanuā mūd, three kanuā or three-fourths of a pauā.

Ond pau or pauā, one pauā of land.

REMARK.—Pauā or pawā is Hindi and has the meaning of one-fourth part of a sēr-two pounds: ond pauā khal, one pauā land is therefore, again one-fourth part of a larger or complete quantity, viz. the kharī; ond kharī-khal, four pauā land. One pawā of low rice land is a quantity of land on which about four “maunds” of paddy seed-grain can be sown. Kanī and Kanuā are also Hindi words.

Ond Kōs, one Kōs, about two miles in length.

Ond gōḷī, a distance as far as a small round stone may be thrown.

Ond dāṅg or dāṅḍ, dāṅḍā, about ten feet.

APPENDIX X.

List of Kurukh demons.

1. Baraṇḍā, the supreme spirit, supposed to reside in the mountains masc.
- Hindī. 2. Baraṇḍō, whirlwind : fem.
- „ 3. Darhā, the village bhūt ; masc.
- „ 4. Dēs-wāṭi, his wife.
- „ 5. Khūṭā, the family bhūt.
- „ 6. Goīsālī, the god of the cows.

APPENDIX XVII.

In Court.

What is your complaint? Ninghai endr nālis ra'i?

Sir, Budhū Mahto cut my paddy—Ana urbay Budhū Māhtos enghai khessan khossas.

Who has ploughed and sown? Nē ussā darā cākhā?

I ploughed, Sir! I dug and made the embankment, and I sowed, all with my own hands—Ēnim ussakan, Urbay, ēnim khoskan darā pagār laukkan, ēnim cākhkan, urmi enghai dim khekā tru manjā.

Have you witnesses who have seen it? Nikim iryar darā ningtarā gawāhī ciā ongor?

Yes, Sir, Sōmrā helped me in ploughing and was present when I sowed—Ha'i Urbay, Sōmras enghai khalan pasri niyas, āsim enghai cākhkā num hūdi ra'alagyas.

How did Budhū cut your rice? Budhus ninghai khessan ekasē khossas?

He had quite a number of villagers with him when he came to the field, all rendering help to cut my paddy—Ās gusan paddantā baggē ālar ra'alagyar. Enghai khal nū tarcar khanē ās gē kho'enum khoenum saharā cicar.

Did not you remonstrate with him? Nin āsin masā barjā'ekai be'edai?

What could I do, I was alone and his party being so large—Endr nanon! Ēn okhānim ra'akan, ār kōhā kōhā gohonḍā ra'acar.

What did Sōmrā do after cutting the rice?

Khessan khossas darā Sōmras endr nanjas?

He and his people carried it to his threshing floor.

Ās tanghai ālar sangē khessan tanghai khal nū hōa'r kī uiyas cicas.

Then what did you do?

Ani nīn endr nanjkai.

I went to the police-station to give notice, but the Sub-Inspector told me to go to Court and lodge a complaint.

Ēn Thānā kerkan darā hāl cickan, pahē Darōgas adālat nū nālis nanā gē ānyas.

You Budhū, do you plead guilty to having cut Birsā's paddy ?

Anā Budhū menā, nin Birsas gahi khessan khosskai kī gunhan tengrālag-dai ?

Sir, I have cut the rice, but it is not Birsā's, it is my own.

Urbāyo, khessan ēn endrnā malā khoyon, enghai dim gā ra'i, Birsas gahi mahi.

What's the name of the paddy-field ?

Khesa khal gahi endr nāme ?

It is called Kusum Chaurā, Sir.

Kussum chaurā gā bāi'ri'i, Urbay.

Who did the ploughing and sowing ?

Uinā cākhnā nē nanjā ?

I have done it with my servants.

Ēnim gā dhanigar ganē urmi nalakh nanjkan ra'adan.

But Birsā's allegation is that he did that all. Who speaks the truth ?

Backa Birsas gā āndas : ēnim urmi nanjkan ra'adan, nē satē ān'i ?

What can I know, Sir—I have not seen him doing it ?

Nē akhō Urbay, ēn ās gahi uinan cākhnān mal irkan ra'adan.

Whose jōt is Kusum Chaurā ?

Kusum caurā nekhai jōt ra'i ?

It is part of my mahtōi land.

Hūd gā mahtowāi khal gahi ond khand ra'i.

Since what year have you been Mahtō of the village ?

Paddantā Mahtō ēō cānti manjkai ra'adai ?

Since two years.

Cānenḍ gā manjā kērā.

Who was Mahtō before you ?

Ningan tī mund Mahtō nē ra'acā ?

Birsā's father was Mahtō for some time.

Jek ullā khairi Birsas gohi tambas gā ra'alogyas.

Did Birsā ever put forward a claim with regard to this land ?

Birsas i khāl gahi bārē nū iklā hō dābi nanjkas ra'acus ?

Yes, he claims it as his bhuinhāri, and last year tried to cut my paddy.

Ha'i, utingālī "enghai addiyā khāl ra'i" bācas kī enghai khessan khossā bidyas.

Did you not complain against him in Court ?

Nin adālat nū ās mēyā nālis malā nanjkai ?

Yes, Sir, I sued him in the Criminal Court.

Ha'i, Urbay, phaujdhāri nālis nanjkan gā.

Who got a decree ?

Digrī nekā gē khakhrā ?

None of us got a decree, but I was ordered to lodge a suit in the Civil Court, because Birsā had succeeded in finding false witnesses to swear that he had ploughed and sowed.

Nekāgē hō malā manjā, backān Hākimis engā gē hukum c'cas kī ānyas : nīm dewānī nanā ; enr gē Birsas jhūthā gawāharin ondras c'cas, ār kiriyā mokhar darā tingyar : Birsas ussas darā cākhās.

Then why did not you go up to the Civil Court ?

Antilē adālat nū dewānī endrnā mal nanjkai ?

Because the land in dispute belongs to me and since I have been Mahtō of the village I always used to plough and sow and keep it in possession therefore my pleader advised me, not to sue in the Civil Court.

Khāl cā enghai dim ra'i ; arā Mahtō ra'ckā pariyanṭī ēnim gā cān cān usskan, cākhkan darā dakhāl nū uikim ra'adan. "Holē endrgē nālis nanoe" enghai Mokhtāras ānyas.

What evidence is there that Kusum Chaurā is service land ?

Kusum Courā naukri khāl ra'i ādigē endr sabūt ra'i ?

It has been measured and demarcated as such by Rakhal Dās Haldār, Special Commissioner, and my landlord, Rām Chandr Rai, will bear witness that I have been in his service since the last two years - Rakhal bābu is'ishaj kamishnar painās nantācas, pakhnan garṭa'cas darā Mahtowāi, oktācas. Enghai Gollas Rām candr hō gawāhī c'os jē ēn cāneṇṇ paddā nū ās gahi mahtowāi nanjkan be'edan.

Well Birsā, what are your titles in the land inquestion ?

Anti Birsā'e ninim tengā : ā lakṭā khāl nū ninghai endr akhtiyār rāi ?

It is my hereditary bhuiharī land, measured and demarcated in the name of my father, Sukrū Mathō—

Ād purkhā gahi pāriyan ti enghai bhuihārī khal tali; arā embas gahi nāme nū, paimās manjkā tē pakhan gārī hō manjā kērā; embas gahi nāmē Sukrū Mahtō ra'acā.

To what khūt do you belong?

Nīn endr khūt gahi āl hēkdai?

I and my forefathers belong to the Mahtō khūt.

Ēnim darā purukhar ormar Mahtō khūt gahi hīkdam ra'adam.

To what khūt does Budhū belongs?

Budhus ēkā khūntanta ra'adas?

I do not know; he came to our place from quite another village; he is a Gaurō, no Bhuihār.

Ādin ēn baldan; ās nannā tartim enghai pāddā barcas darā Gaurō hīkdas, bhuihār māyās.

Do you pay any rent for Kusum Chaurā?

Nīn Kusum Chaurā cadde jokendr māl cū'dai?

My father never paid rent for that land, neither did I: it is a rent-free bhuiharī holding.

Embās gā iktā hō māl malā cicas, anti ēn hō malā cickan, ā khal gahi karanē māl cī'inā mala mani; bhuihārī ra'ī dūgē.

Do you render predial services on account of your bhuiharī lands?

Nīn ninghai bhuihārī khal gahi bithī cī'dai kā malā?

We never did. Why should I give then?

Ēn iktā hō malā nanjkam ra'adam, antilē endrgē bithī cī'on?

Did the landlord never demand rent or services from you or your father?

Gollas iklam hō ningusti ka nimbas gustilē malā biddyas?

He did, but we did not give him, why should we?

Neā gā nēcas, pāhē em hāl hukum malā uikam, endr gē bithī nanom?

Have you any more lands in the village?

Paddā nū ninghai jokendr nannā khal ra'ī kā?

Yes, sir, bhuihārī as well as rajhas and kōrkār.

Ha'ī, Urbayo, bhuihārī darā kōrkār hō gā ra'ī.

Have you got receipts for the rent paid?

Māl cickai, ādigahi rasit khakkkas be'edai?

For the chatisā I pay Rs. 6 per pawā and for kōrkār half that rate. I paid the rent into the treasury; the receipts of Government are with me.

Chchatisā gahi ond pawā gē chau takā ci'idan, arā kōrkār gē adhkār ci'idan.
Ēn shikdrī nū sajkan be'edan darā Sankārī rasit engusanim ra'i

Why did you not pay to the Zamindar directly?

Gollas gē endrnā māl malā cickai?

Because he would not give me any receipt and wants to oust me of my bhuiharī land and drive me away from the village altogether.

As rāsit ciam mal ci'idas darā enghai bhuiharī khalan bacā beddas darō paddan tī engan khēdā gē or lagabādas.

Who are you?

Nin ekā ortai?

I am Sukrū, the village priest.

Ēn Sukrun paddantā naig ra'adan.

What do you know about the dispute between Budhū and Birsā?

Nin Budhus darā Birsas gahi mukadmā gahi bārē nū endr ckh dai?

Birsā is a great liar, Sir, that I know for certain.

Birsas kōhā phasyā ālas taldas, ādin ēn mānim akhālagēn.

In whose possession is Kusum Chaurā?

Kusum Caurā nekhai dakhai nū ra'i?

Kusum Chaurā is Mahtowāi service land, and whoever is Mahtō, he cultivates it.

Kusum Caurā Mahtowāi khal ra'i, nik'im jē Mahtō ra'anar arim gā uinar.

This we know, but tell us whether it is in Birsā's possession or in Budhū's?

Ādin gā akhdam, bacchan tengār ci'ā, akkun nēkhai dakhai nū ra'i, Birsāgahi nū ra'i kā Budhus gahi?

Sir, what can I say, both plough and sow and reap.

Ur̄bay, endr bā'on, irbarim gā uinar cākhnar, k̄hoynar.

Then what do you think, who has a right to do so?

Khanō endr orgdai, nēkhai hak ra'i?

Birsā's father put forward a claim of Bhuihari with regard to that land, but Rakhā Babu dismissed that claim. Being village Mahtō and of the Mahtō khūnt he remained in possession of it until his death, whereupon Budhū was appointed Mahtō by the landlord. Therefore according to our custom the land belongs to Budhū.

Birsas gahi tambas " ewghai bhuihari ra'ā " bācas kī dābī nanjkas ra'ocas pahē Rakhā Bābūs dismiss nanjas. Paddantā Mahtōs ra'ackā num arā Mahtō khūnt gahi manjkān tī ās khe'enā gūti ā khalan dakhā nanjkā num ra'a agyas Khokhā gollas Budhusin Mahtō uiyas. Igē emhai nēycār lekā ā khal Budhus gahi dim ra'ā.

You may be right; now go home.

Ēndr akho's nān thāulam ānkai; akkun erpā kalā.
